Selznick The Man Who Produced Gone With The Wind:

Selznick Bob Thomas, 2001-04 In the days when Hollywood films were being cranked out by the big studios the way Detroit turned out automobiles one man clung to the belief that a motion picture was like a painting which had to be painted and signed by a single artist In 1939 David O Selznick justified his belief He was 37 years old when Gone With the Wind was released to thunderous accolades It was the triumph and the tragedy of his life As a producer he had reached the pinnacle of success there was nowhere else to go In this biography Bob Thomas tells the story of the stormy career of a man who personified the label legend It tells of the women he loved and the fortunes he amassed and lost of the great stars he made and the magnificent motion pictures he created Here is the man himself the author of endless memos the compulsive gambler the driving perfectionist Selznick's life is also a kaleidoscopic reflection of Hollywood's golden era when movies were meant to entertain when the word star was synonymous with glamour and the word damn violated the production code what it reveals about changing ideas of femininity in a postplantation economy while Deborah Barker explores transgressive sexuality in the film version by comparing it to the depiction of rape in D W Griffith's earlier silent classic Birth of a Nation. Other essays position the novel and film within the context of their legacy and their impact on national and international audiences. Amy Clukey and James Crank inspect the reception of Gone with the Wind by Irish critics and gay communities respectively. Daniel Cross, Turner Keaghan, Turner and Rich Richardson consider its aesthetic impact and mythology and the ways that contemporary writers and artists such as Natasha Trethewey and Kara Walker have engaged with the work. Finally, Helen Taylor sums up the pervading influence that Gone with the Wind continues to exert on audiences in both America and Britain. Through an emphasis on intertextuality, sexuality and questions of audience and identity, these essayists deepen the ongoing conversation about the cultural impact and influence of this monumental work. Flawed in many ways yet successful beyond its time, Gone with the Wind remains a touchstone in southern studies.

Historical Film. Jonathan Stubbs, 2013-03-28. Although precise definitions have not been agreed on, historical cinema tends to cut across existing genre categories and establishes an intimidatingly large group of films. In recent years, a lively body of work has developed around historical cinema, much of it proposing valuable new ways to consider the relationship between cinematic and historical representation. However, only a small proportion of this writing has paid attention to the issue of genre. In order to counter this omission, this book combines a critical analysis of the Hollywood historical film with an examination of its generic dimensions and a history of its development since the silent period.

Historical Film: A Critical Introduction is concerned not simply with the formal properties of the films at hand but also the ways in which they have been promoted, interpreted and discussed in relation to their engagement with the past.

Gone With the Wind. Helen Taylor, 2019-07-25. Gone with the Wind 1939 is one of the greatest films of all time, the best known of Hollywood's Golden Age and a work that has in popular imagination defined southern American history for three quarters of a century. Drawing on three decades of pertinent research, Helen Taylor charts the film's production history, reception and legacy.

Olivier. Terry Coleman, 2005-11. In this mesmerizing book, acclaimed biographer Terry Coleman draws for the first time on the vast archive of Olivier's private papers and correspondence and those of his family, finally uncovering the history and the private self that Olivier worked so masterfully all his life to obscure.
