A Selection of Religious Lyrics Douglas Gray,1975 One of England's most remarkable contributions to medieval literature is a large body of religious lyric verse the product of a living native tradition of piety and devotional writing which was at the same time part of a common Western European Christian tradition These poems sometimes use the sophisticated literary techniques of their day but more often are anonymous simple and unaffected The best of them achieve an impressive dignity moderation and clarity and in the words of a contemporary mystic a marvellous homeliness This selection represents a large number of the more attractive and interesting lyrics and illustrates not only their own excellence but also the variety and the potentialities of the traditional types to which they belong The poems are edited from the manuscripts a number have not previously been published and are accompanied by full notes and a glossary

Anthologies of British Poetry ,2021-11-22 From Tottel's Miscellany 1557 to the last twentieth century Oxford Book of English Verse 1999 anthologies have been a prime institution for the preservation and mediation of poetry The importance of anthologies for creating and re-creating the canon of English poetry for introducing new programmes of poetry as a record of changing poetic fashions audience tastes and reading practices or as a profitable literary commodity has often been asserted Despite its impact however the poetry anthology in itself has attracted surprisingly little critical interest in Britain or elsewhere in the English speaking world This volume is the first publication to explore the largely unmapped field of poetry anthologies in Britain Essays written from a wide range of perspectives in literary and cultural studies and the point of view of poets editors publishers and cultural institutions aim to do justice to the typological functional and historical variety with which this form of publication has manifested itself from early modern print culture to the postmodern age of the world wide web
