Moliere Le Misanthrope:

The Misanthrope Molière, 1922 Le misanthrope Molière, 1908 The Misanthrope Molière, 2017-08-25

The Misanthrope or the Cantankerous Lover French Le Misanthrope ou l'Atrabilaire amoureux is a 17th century comedy of manners in verse written by Molière. It was first performed on 4 June 1666 at the Théâtre du Palais Royal Paris by the King's Players. The play satirizes the hypocrisies of French aristocratic society but it also engages a more serious tone when pointing out the flaws which all humans possess. The play differs from other farces at the time by employing dynamic characters like Alceste and Celimène as opposed to the traditionally flat characters used by most satirists to criticize problems in society. It also differs from most of Molière's other works by focusing more on character development and nuances than on plot progression. The play though not a commercial success in its time survives as Molière's best known work today. Because both Tartuffe and Dom Juan two of Molière's previous plays had already been banned by the French government Molière may have subdued his actual ideas to make his play more socially acceptable. As a result there is much uncertainty about whether the main character Alceste is supposed to be perceived as a hero for his strong standards of honesty or whether he is supposed to be perceived as a fool for having such idealistic and unrealistic views about society. Molière has received much criticism for The Misanthrope. The French philosopher Jean-Jacques Rousseau claimed in his Letter to M. D'Alembert on Spectacles that it was Molière's best work but hated the fact that Alceste was depicted as a fool on stage. He believed that the audience should be supporting Alceste and his views about society rather than disregarding his idealistic notions and belittling him as a character.

Synopsis Much to the horror of his friends and companions Alceste rejects la politesse the social conventions of the seventeenth century French salon. His refusal to make nice makes him tremendously unpopular and he laments his isolation in a world he sees as superficial and base. Early in Act I Mankind has grown so base I mean to break with the whole human race. Despite his convictions however Alceste cannot help but love the flighty and vivacious Celimène a consummate flirt whose wit and frivolity epitomize the courtly manners that Alceste despises. Though he constantly reprimands her Celimène refuses to change charging Alceste with being unfit for society. Despite his sour reputation as the misanthrope Alceste does have women pining for him particularly the prudish Arsinoë and the honest Eliante. Though he acknowledges their superior virtues his heart still lies with Celimène. His deep feelings for her primarily serve to counter his negative expressions about mankind since the fact that he has such feelings includes him amongst those he so fiercely criticizes. When Alceste insults a sonnet written by the powerful noble Oronte he is called to stand trial. Refusing to dole out false compliments he is charged and humiliated and resolves on self-imposed exile. Arsinoë in trying to win his affections shows him a love letter Celimène wrote to another suitor. He discovers that Celimène has been leading him on. She has written identical love letters to numerous suitors including to Oronte and broken her vow to favor him above all others. He gives her an ultimatum he will forgive her and marry her if she runs away with him to exile. Celimène refuses believing herself too young and beautiful to leave society and all her suitors behind Philinte for his part becomes betrothed to Eliante Alceste then decides to exile himself from society and the play ends with Philinte and Eliante running off to convince him to return The Misanthrope Molière, 2005 Drama Classics The World's Great Plays at a Great Little Price Molière's most admired comedy of manners about a man whose quickness to criticise the flaws in others and in himself leads him into deep trouble Alceste the misanthrope hates all mankind and despairs of its hypocrisy and falseness He believes that the world could be perfected if people were more honest with each other But when his honesty starts to make him enemies and the target of malicious gossips it is his world and his life which suffer The Misanthrope or the Cantankerous Lover Le Misanthrope ou l'Atrabilaire amoureux was first performed in 1666 at the Théâtre du Palais Royal Paris This English version in the Nick Hern Books Drama Classics series is translated and introduced by Stephen Mulrine Le Misanthrope (The Misanthrope) Molière, 1913
