

NOTHING GOLD CAN STAY

BY ROBERT FROST

Nature's first green is gold,
Her hardest hue to hold.
Her early leaf's a flower;
But only so an hour.
Then leaf subsides to leaf.
So Eden sank to grief,
So dawn goes down to day.
Nothing gold can stay.

The Shapes of Natural Things Blake Townsend Romanov, 2017-07-10 This The Shapes Of Natural Things is a book of poems about nature love God and the intersection of plant animal human and divine things It is written in rhyme and meter with the exception of the limerick which is not strictly metrical The poems in this book are mainly dedicated to one woman but there are others to and about other friends as well as about issues that interest me in the realm of religion philosophy psychology etc It is the third book I have written under the name Blake Townsend Romanov the others being Pare My Heart and Draw Me A Spirit Those books are dedicated to other women and as with them I have used a pseudonym not only for myself but for the muse In spite of the singularity of its dedication this book like the previous two is meant to be enjoyed by all As a poet I indulged in rich language and bountiful melody and my goal is not so much to change poetry as to provide people with the very sort of joy for which people in the past as well as today have looked to poetry I am an entertainer though my thoughts are earnestly given In my view poetry is a region in which the logical and the aesthetic blend ideas can be beautiful especially when they are adorned with choice words That said I very much want my poems to be understood as well as to impress I feel that metaphor however is a type of lying that leads ultimately to truth We were pulled away from the literal truth of what is being discussed only to resolve metaphor and the object of description in a metaphysical unity of meaning That being said adorning of ideas is not merely in lexicon or comparison it must be sensory as well Thus I have attempted to draw on the beauty of natural forms and natural life and hope that those sensations especially images stand alone as beautiful even independently of the critical context Finally I have tried to make this book thematically related throughout and one of my major themes has been the relation between the will of the spirit and natural things instinct and the binding of cause effect the limitation that come with inhabiting form and with our perception which is bound to form Thus I call it The Shapes Of Natural Things
