Costrell, 1988 Self-Organization in Electrochemical Systems I Marek Orlik, 2012-09-08 This is the first of two volumes offering the very first comprehensive treatise of self organization and non linear dynamics in electrochemical systems The second volume covers spatiotemporal patterns and the control of chaos The content of both volumes is organized so that each description of a particular electrochemical system is preceded by an introduction to basic concepts of nonlinear dynamics in order to help the reader unfamiliar with this discipline to understand at least fundamental concepts and the methods of stability analysis The presentation of the systems is not limited to laboratory models but stretches out to real life objects and processes including systems of biological importance such as neurons in living matter Marek Orlik presents a comprehensive and consistent survey of the field Intelligent Scheduling Systems Donald E. Brown, William T. Scherer, 2012-12-06 Scheduling is a resource allocation problem which exists in virtually every type of organization

Scheduling problems have produced roughly 40 years of research primarily within the OR community This community has traditionally emphasized mathematical modeling techniques which seek exact solutions to well formulated optimization problems While this approach produced important results many contemporary scheduling problems are particularly difficult Hence over the last ten years operations researchers interested in scheduling have turned increasingly to more computer intensive and heuristic approaches At roughly the same time researchers in AI began to focus their methods on industrial and management science applications The result of this confluence of fields has been a period of remarkable growth and excitement in scheduling research Intelligent Scheduling Systems captures the results of a new wave of research at the forefront of scheduling research of interest to researchers and practitioners alike Presented are an array of the latest contemporary tools math modeling to tabu search to genetic algorithms that can assist in operational scheduling and solve difficult scheduling problems The book presents the most recent research results from both operations research OR and artificial intelligence AI focusing their efforts on real scheduling problems Self-Organization in Electrochemical Systems II Marek Orlik, 2012-09-07 This is the second of two volumes offering the very first comprehensive treatise of self organization and non linear dynamics in electrochemical systems The first volume covers general principles of self organization as well as temporal instabilities The content of both volumes is organized so that each description of a particular electrochemical system is preceded by an introduction to basic concepts of nonlinear dynamics in order to help the reader unfamiliar with this discipline to understand at least fundamental concepts and the methods of stability analysis The presentation of the systems is not limited to laboratory models but stretches out to real life objects and processes including systems of biological importance such as neurons in living matter Marek Orlik presents a comprehensive and consistent survey of the field
