Pathways To People:

Pathways to People Leonard W. Doob, 1975-09-10 In this wide ranging and fascinating book Leonard Doob explores what we know about human action and interaction in order to show how people succeed or fail in their constant attempts to understand each other He organizes our ways of knowing each other into two sorts of pathways to people The first pathways are those that have been investigated by psychiatrists psychologists and social scientists Mr Doob offers a critical summary of our systematic knowledge in the area of what is sometimes called person perception By and large he is dissatisfied with what we think we know because too much of the research stems from a convenient but not typical sample of mankind the college student The second set of pathways are those intended to improve judgment or avoid error and they come not only from the scientific disciplines but also from the humanities along with common sense Together the pathways constitute the factors or variables that determine how and why human judgments are made and how they should be made The exposition is occasionally interrupted by a devil s advocate offering lively and cutting criticism of what is being said In this manner Leonard Doob opens another pathway between reader and author which makes reading this book a rich and provocative experience

Moved to Action Hahrie C. Han, 2009-08-17 Wealthy educated and more privileged people are more likely to participate and be represented in politics than their poorer less educated and less privileged counterparts To reduce these inequalities we need a better understanding of how the disadvantaged become motivated to participate Moved to Action fills the current gap in this area of research by examining the commitments and pathways through which the underprivileged become engaged in politics Drawing on original in depth interviews with political activists and large scale survey data author Hahrie C Han contests the traditional idea that people must be politicized before they participate and that only idiosyncratic factors outside the control of the political system can drive motivation Her findings show that that highly personal commitments such as the quality of children s education or the desire to help a friend have a disproportionately large impact in motivating political participation among people with fewer resources Han makes the case that civic and political organizations can lay the foundation for greater citizen participation by helping people recognize the connections between their personal commitments and politics

Sawyer, 2015-01-29 This volume examines current and previous environmental policies and suggests alternative strategies for the future Addressing resource depletion and climate change are pressing priorities for modern economies Planning energy infrastructure projects is complicated by uncertainty as such clear government policies have a crucial role to play Restructuring Capitalism Rogene Buchholz, 2017-04-21 The main theme of this book is that within contemporary capitalist societies a materialist outlook informed by science has triumphed creating the lack of a spiritual dimension to give meaning and purpose to the activities that are necessary for a capitalist society to function effectively Capitalist societies are in trouble and need to be restructured to provide for the material needs of all the people who work within the system not just the one percent but because of the lack of a spiritual connection with each other and with nature this is not likely to happen It has been said that society and the organizations within treat one another as objects to be manipulated in the interests of promoting economic growth and treat nature as an object to be exploited for the same purpose This way of treating each other and nature is consistent with the way a capitalist system has worked in the past and was supposed to enable it to function efficiently to provide a fulfilling and enriched life for all its adherents through growth of the economy However as capitalist societies have become dysfunctional they will need a different kind of orientation to continue in existence Restructuring Capitalism Materialism and Spiritualism in Business argues that what is needed is a new sense of a spiritualization of the self and its relation to others and to the establishment of a spiritual connection with nature in order for capitalism to be restructured to work for everyone and for the society as a whole Maoist People's War and the Revolution of Everyday Life in Nepal Ina Zharkevich, 2019-05-09 By providing a rich ethnography of wartime social processes in the former Maoist heartland of Nepal this book explores how the Maoist People's War 1996-2006 transformed Nepali society Drawing on long term fieldwork with people who were located at the epicentre of the conflict including both ardent Maoist supporters and reluctant rebels it explores how a remote Himalayan village was forged as the centre of the Maoist rebellion how its inhabitants coped with the situation of war and the Maoist regime of governance and how they came to embrace the Maoist project and maintain ordinary life amidst the war while living in a guerilla enclave By focusing on people's everyday lives the book illuminates how the everyday became a primary site of revolution of crafting new subjectivities introducing new social practices and displacing the old ones and reconfiguring the ways that people act in and think about the world through the process of embodied change Ethical Beginnings

Waymond Rodgers,2009 Waymond Rodgers PhD CPA has worked over fifteen years studying how to combine ethical considerations with a decision making model of perception information and judgment that will foster better decision making processes resulting in an overall improvement of daily life He has presented seminars on ethics at numerous international conferences and also provided ethics presentations to corporations societies universities and other organizations such as Opus Dei The need for ethics in society is such an important factor because many commonly held ethical values are incorporated into laws Yet due to the judgmental nature of certain values many ethical values of a society cannot be incorporated into law Ethical process thinking involves discerning right from wrong and acting in alignment with such judgments enabling us to complement several ethical approaches of preferences rules and principles with unique decision making pathways leading to an ethical decision Ethical decisions can be difficult to make due to a misunderstanding of the decision making process incomplete information changing environments time pressures and a lack of expertise Ethical Beginnings Preferences Rules and Principles influencing decision making explains the major barriers to ethical decision making why structuring a problem is necessary and when to use information for decision making purposes Oceanic Socialities and Cultural Forms Ingjerd Hoëm,Sidsel Roalkvam,2003-02-01 In anthropology theoretical approaches attempting to come to terms with experiences of social interaction often inspired by phenomenology have come to the fore in opposition to the previously favored emphasis on symbolic and social structures These essays attempt a new kind of ethnographic description of social life that treats structure and practice as aspects of the same reality This is achieved through attention to indigenous conceptualizations of the way society itself is generated With Jonathan Friedman and Fredrik Barth providing overviews this series of innovative ethnographies highlights ways of forming social relations specific to Oceania as a cultural area exemplifying a new kind of comparative approach and making a major contribution to general social theory

Religion and Family in a Changing Society Penny Edgell, 2013-12-03 The 1950s religious boom was organized around the male breadwinner lifestyle in the burgeoning postwar suburbs. But since the 1950s, family life has been fundamentally reconfigured in the United States. How do religion and family fit together today? This book examines how religious congregations in America have responded to changes in family structure and how families participate in local religious life. Based on a study of congregations and community residents in upstate New York, sociologist Penny Edgell argues that while some religious groups may be nostalgic for the Ozzie and Harriet days, others are changing, knowing that fewer and fewer families fit this traditional pattern. In order to keep members with nontraditional family arrangements within the congregation, these innovators have sought to emphasize individual freedom and personal spirituality and actively to welcome single adults and those from nontraditional families. Edgell shows that mothers and fathers seek involvement in congregations for different reasons. Men tend to think of congregations as social support structures and to get involved as a means of participating in the lives of their children. Women, by contrast, are more often motivated by the quest for religious experience and can adapt more readily to pluralist ideas about family structure. This, Edgell concludes, may explain the attraction of men to more conservative congregations and women to nontraditional religious groups.
