

The background is a classical religious painting. It depicts St. Paul, identifiable by his halo and reddish-brown cloak, standing and gesturing with both hands raised towards a group of people. The setting appears to be an interior with architectural elements like columns and arches. The lighting is dramatic, highlighting Paul's figure against a darker background. The overall style is reminiscent of Renaissance or Baroque religious art.

B. A. Asiedu, 2019-11-20 Paul the apostle and historian Flavius Josephus spent considerable parts of their careers away from Jerusalem. They cultivated Roman audiences under very different circumstances. Paul with his Letter to the Romans and Josephus with the writings he produced in Rome after the Jewish War. Curiously, Paul's last visit to Jerusalem coincided with Josephus's entry into public life, a period about which Josephus is deliberately silent. In Paul and His Letters: Thinking with Josephus, F. B. A. Asiedu selects themes from Josephus's life to explore Paul's letters and biography that contribute to his uniqueness in Jewish history. He highlights, for example, the need to read Romans 9-11 as aporetic discourse to appreciate Paul as an existential thinker. Asiedu considers, among other things, the authenticity of Paul's letters and offers an alternative to the prevailing scholarly consensus. He also maintains that the Pauline collection in the New Testament first took shape in the house of Gaius in Corinth, where Paul composed his Letter to the Romans. Asiedu also suggests that the traditional view that Luke the physician wrote the Acts of the Apostles is probably a mistake. He argues that Titus, the Greek coworker and friend of Barnabas and Paul, most likely authored it.

Jerome's Commentaries on the Pauline Epistles and the Architecture of Exegetical Authority Andrew Cain, 2021-10-07. In the late fourth and early fifth centuries, during a fifty-year stretch sometimes dubbed a Pauline renaissance of the Western Church, six different authors produced over four dozen commentaries in Latin on Paul's epistles. Among them was Jerome, who commented on four epistles: Galatians, Ephesians, Titus, and Philemon, in 386, after recently having relocated to Bethlehem from Rome. His commentaries occupy a time-honored place in the centuries-long tradition of Latin language commenting on Paul's writings. They also constitute his first foray into the systematic exposition of whole biblical books and his only experiment with Pauline interpretation on this scale, and so they provide precious insight into his intellectual development at a critical stage of his early career, before he would go on to become the most prolific biblical scholar of Late Antiquity. This monograph provides the first book-length treatment of Jerome's opus Paulinum in any language. Adopting a cross-disciplinary approach, Cain comprehensively analyzes the commentaries' most salient aspects from the inner workings of Jerome's philological method and engagement with his Greek exegetical sources to his recruitment of Paul as an anachronistic surrogate for his own theological and ascetic special interests. One of the overarching concerns of this book is to explore and to answer, from multiple vantage points, a question that was absolutely fundamental to Jerome in his fourth-century context: what are the sophisticated mechanisms by which he legitimized himself as a Pauline commentator, not only on his own terms but also vis-à-vis contemporary Western commentators?

A Discourse Analysis of Galatians and the New Perspective on Paul David I. Yoon, 2019-04-09. In A Discourse Analysis of Galatians and the New Perspective on Paul, David I. Yoon outlines discourse analysis from the framework of Systemic Functional Linguistics for analyzing Paul's letter to the Galatians. From this analysis, he determines whether the context of situation better reflects the New Perspective on Paul, covenantal nomism, or a more traditional perspective, legalism. The first half of the book introduces the New Perspective on Paul and discourse analysis, followed by a detailed model of SFL discourse analysis with respect to register and context of situation The second half is a discourse analysis of Galatians This is the first monograph length study to address the New Perspective on Paul from a linguistic approach and will as such be of great interest to scholars of Pauline Studies linguistics and theology

Paul Robert Paul Seesengood, 2010-01-15 Seesengood traces the life and impact of Paul one of Christianity s most
