Research Based Decisions:

Evidence-Based Decision-Making Andrew D. Banasiewicz, 2019-03-04 Evidence Based Decision Making How to Leverage Available Data and Avoid Cognitive Biases examines how a wide range of factual evidence primarily derived from a variety of data available to organizations can be used to improve the quality of business decision making by helping decision makers circumvent the various cognitive biases that adversely impact how we all think The book is built on the following premise During the past decade the new data world emerged in which the rush to develop competencies around business analytics and data science can be characterized as nothing less than the new commercial arms race The ever expanding volume and variety of data are well known as are the great advances in data processing analytics data visualization and related information production focused capabilities Yet comparatively little effort has been devoted to how the informational products of business analytics and data science are consumed or used in the organizational decision making processes as the available evidence shows that only some of that information is used to drive some business decisions some of the time Evidence Based Decision Making details an explicit process describing how the universe of available and applicable evidence which includes organizational and other data industry benchmarks scientific studies and professional experience can be assessed amalgamated and funneled into an objective driver of key business decisions Introducing key concepts in relation to data and evidence and the history of evidence based management this new and extremely topical book will be essential reading for researchers and students of data analytics as well as those working in the private and public sectors and in the voluntary sector

Data-based Decision Making in Education Kim Schildkamp, Mei Kuin Lai, Lorna Earl, 2012-09-17 In a context where schools are held more and more accountable for the education they provide data based decision making has become increasingly important This book brings together scholars from several countries to examine data based decision making Data based decision making in this book refers to making decisions based on a broad range of evidence such as scores on students assessments classroom observations etc This book supports policy makers people working with schools researchers and school leaders and teachers in the use of data by bringing together the current research conducted on data use across multiple countries into a single volume Some of these studies are best practice studies where effective data use has led to improvements in student learning Others provide insight into challenges in both policy and practice environments Each of them draws on research and literature in the field

Evidence-based Decisions and Economics Ian Shemilt, Miranda Mugford, Luke Vale, Kevin Marsh, Cam Donaldson, 2011-09-22 The need for evidence based decisions that take account of both effectiveness and economics is greater now than ever Using case studies and illustrative examples throughout the authors describe how the activities and outputs of evidence synthesis systematic review economic analysis and decision making interact within and across different spheres of health and social policy and practice Expanding on the first edition the book now covers approaches to evidence synthesis that combine economics and systematic review methods in the applied fields of social welfare education and criminal justice as well as health care Written by economists and health services researchers closely involved in developing evidence based policy and practice it showcases current state of the art methodology and will be an invaluable read for all policy makers and practitioners using evidence to inform decisions analysts conducting research to support decisions and students discovering the need for evidence based decisions to Experience-Based Decisions Eldad Yechiam, Itzhak Aharon, In experience based decisions people learn to make decisions by sampling the relevant alternatives and getting feedback The study of experience based decisions has recently revealed some robust regularities that differ from how people make decisions based on descriptions For example people were found to underweight small probability events in experience based decisions while overweighting them in decisions based on descriptions i e where the participants have full information about the outcome distributions but no feedback This is now commonly referred to as the description experience gap In parallel to the recent advancement in Decision Science neuroscientists have for a long while used the experience based decisions paradigm for analyzing brain behavior interactions For example phenomena such as the feedback based Error Related Negativity fERN in event related potentials and the role of non declarative knowledge in selecting advantageously were discovered using experience based tasks The goal of the current Research Topic is to combine two sources of knowledge concerning experience based decisions State of the art models in decision science and neuroscientific and psychophysiological approaches that shed light on the working of the brain in these decisions Also relevant are process based analyses of fractions of behavior in these types of decisions We consider original empirical work and theoretical analyses of existing datasets Research on Judgment and Decision

Capa,Nicolas Silvestrini,James Steele,Sabrina Ravel,2023-07-12 Dynamics of decision making: from evidence to preference and belief Erica Yu,David A. Lagnado,2014-10-24 At the core of the many debates throughout cognitive science concerning how decisions are made are the processes governing the time course of preference formation and decision From perceptual choices such as whether the signal on a radar screen indicates an enemy missile or a spot on a CT scan indicates a tumor to cognitive value based decisions such as selecting an agreeable flatmate or deciding the guilt of a defendant significant and everyday decisions are dynamic over time Phenomena such as decoy effects preference reversals and order effects are still puzzling researchers For example in a legal context jurors receive discrete pieces of evidence in sequence and must integrate these pieces together to reach a singular verdict From a standard Bayesian viewpoint the order in which people receive the evidence should not influence their final decision and yet order effects seem a robust empirical phenomena in many decision contexts Current research on how decisions unfold especially in a dynamic environment is advancing our theoretical understanding of decision making This Research Topic aims to review and further explore the time

course of a decision from how prior beliefs are formed to how those beliefs are used and updated over time towards the formation of preferences and choices and post decision processes and effects Research literatures encompassing varied approaches to the time scale of decisions will be brought into scope a Speeded decisions and post decision processes that require the accumulation of noisy and possibly non stationary perceptual evidence e g randomly moving dots stimuli within a few seconds with or without temporal uncertainty b Temporally extended value based decisions that integrate feedback values e g gambling machines and internally generated decision criteria e g when one switches attention selectively between the various aspects of several choice alternatives c Temporally extended belief based decisions that build on the integration of evidence which interacts with the decision maker s belief system towards the updating of the beliefs and the formation of judgments and preferences as in the legal context Research that emphasizes theoretical concerns including optimality analysis and mechanisms underlying the decision process both neural and cognitive is presented as well as research that combines experimental and computational levels of analysis
