Several of the best known researchers describe their own work and that of others to illustrate both large scale and local studies. The contributors also take a compelling look into the emotions of sexual assault research by discussing their own emotional experiences of working with rape research including experiences of harassment by subjects or disrespect by colleagues. In addition, several scholars peruse empirical and epistemological questions and arrive at surprising conclusions on feminist participatory research into lesbian battering, reflexivity in studying prostitutes, the gendered nature of research interviews, and white women studying battered women of color. Including chapters on very hot topics and celebrating feminist research methodology, Researching Sexual Violence Against Women speaks to a broad audience including researchers, academics, professionals, and students in the areas of interpersonal violence, social work, sociology, criminology, women's studies, psychology, family studies, and counseling, as well as college administrators and mental health practitioners.

Researching Violence Raymond M. Lee, Elizabeth Anne Stanko, 2003. Violence is a research topic that is fraught with difficulties. A notoriously sensitive subject and one that is presumed to be largely hidden, researchers have long struggled with the question of how to measure its impact and how to explore its incidence. Arising from the ESRC's Violence Research Programme, Researching Violence is a practical guide both to these problems and to the obstacles encountered when negotiating this uneasy terrain. Comprising the reflections of researchers who have worked on diverse projects from violence in the home to racial violence and homicide, this book demonstrates the ingenuity and at times courageous actions of researchers having to think on their feet. Research as More Than Extraction Annie Bunting, Allen Kiconco, Joel Quirk, 2023-10-24. This volume offers practical, detailed guidance and case studies on how to avoid exacerbating inequalities while researching gender-based violence and other related issues in Africa. Wartime violence and its aftermath present numerous practical, ethical and political challenges that are especially acute for researchers working on gender-based and sexual violence. Drawing upon applied examples from across the African continent, this volume features unique contributions from researchers and practitioners with decades of experience developing research partnerships, designing and undertaking fieldwork, asking sensitive questions, negotiating access, collecting and evaluating information and validating results. These are all endeavors that also raise pressing ethical questions, especially in relation to retraumatization, social stigma and even payment of participants. Ethical and methodological questions cannot be separated from political and institutional considerations. Systems of privilege and marginalization cannot be wished away; so they need to be both interrogated and contested. This is where precedents and power relations established under colonialism and imperialism take center stage. Europeans have been extracting valuable resources from the African continent for centuries. Research into gender-based violence risks being yet another extractive industry. There are times when committed individuals can make valuable contributions to a more equitable future but funding streams knowledge hierarchies and institutional positions continue to have powerful effects Accordingly the contributors to this volume also concentrate upon the layered effects of power and position relationships between researchers organizations and communities and the political economy of knowledge production this brings into focus questions about how and why information gets generated for which kinds of audiences and for whose benefit
