Resource-based Industrialization Richard M. Auty, 1990 This book is the first cross country analysis of resource based industrialization RBI a controversial industrialization strategy favored by developing countries in the 1970s It examines the expectations and the actual experience of RBI in the oil exporting countries Bahrain Cameroon Indonesia Malaysia Nigeria Saudi Arabia Trinidad and Tobago and Venezuela Auty shows that these countries underestimated the risks associated with RBI s large capital intensive projects and that many RBI plants were poorly implemented and became uncompetitive when prices fell below forecast levels However Auty argues given its long gestation period and link to volatile energy markets RBI does have considerable long term potential provided conditions of financial restructuring and macro and micro economic efficiency are met Scholars and students in development economics and advisers and consultants in and to developing country governments will find this important analysis covers a variety of country sizes and efficiency constraints offering a broad range of examples of RBI

Dictators, Democrats, and Development in Southeast Asia Michael T. Rock, 2017 An examination of how dictators and democrats in Indonesia Malaysia and Thailand built and sustained pro growth political coalitions Timber Booms and Institutional Breakdown in Southeast Asia Michael L. Ross, 2001-01-08 Scholars have long studied how institutions emerge and become stable But why do institutions sometimes break down In this book Michael L. Ross explores the breakdown of the institutions that govern natural resource exports in developing states He shows that these institutions often break down when states receive positive trade shocks unanticipated windfalls Drawing on the theory of rent seeking he suggests that these institutions succumb to a problem he calls rent seizing the predatory behavior of politicians who seek to supply rent to others and who purposefully dismantle institutions that restrain them Using case studies of timber booms in Indonesia Malaysia and the Philippines he shows how windfalls tend to trigger rent seizing activities that may have disastrous consequences for state institutions and for the government of natural resources More generally he shows how institutions can collapse when they have become endogenous to any rent seeking process

The Indonesian Production Sharing Contract: An Investor's Perspective Tengku Nathan Machmud, 2000-07-12 The model contract for oil and gas development known as the Production Sharing Contract (PSC) originated in Indonesia in 1966 and enjoyed over a decade of successful implementation with minor adjustments in several oil producing countries In more recent years however numerous problems have arisen as changes in economic realities have driven the level of private investment down This penetrating study the only one of its kind uses legal analysis as well as historical data to pinpoint the reasons for the initial success of the PSC and for its subsequent and persistent frustrations for investors The author first examines the original Indonesian contract along with the variants adopted in Malaysia and the People's Republic of China and then proceeds to an in depth analysis of the main clauses and their amendments and execution in all three countries Taking into account various commissioned surveys and emerging policies and strategies espoused by both governments and industry representatives he concludes with a detailed proposal for an overhauled contract that allows for meaningful adjustments or even renegotiation when the balance of interests between parties changes substantially Focusing as it does on some central issues in global economic development The Indonesian Production Sharing Contract will be of great value to lawyers multinational corporate executives and policymakers far beyond the Asia Pacific region

Development Theory and the Economics of Growth

Jaime Ros, 2001 Why are some countries richer than others Why do some economies grow so much faster than others do Do economies tend to converge at similar levels of per capita income Or is catching up simply impossible These questions have vast implications for human welfare After a period of lack of interest in growth theory they are back on the research agenda of mainstream economics They have also been at the heart of development economics since its inception some decades ago This book endeavors to answer such questions by blending classical contributions to development theory with recent developments in the economics of growth The unifying theme is that early theoretical insights and accumulated empirical knowledge of development economics have much to offer to research in the theory and empirics of economic growth With the help of a number of recent contributions the ideas and insights of the classical literature in development economics can be given simple and rigorous formulations Together they amount to an approach to growth theory that can overcome the long recognized empirical shortcomings of neoclassical growth economics while being free from the objections that can be raised against the new brand of endogenous growth theory In addition to an original thesis on the contribution that early development theory can make to the research program of modern growth economics the book provides professional and research economists and graduate students with an evaluation of the strengths and limitations of the different strands of inquiry in the modern economics of growth In addition it presents findings on comparative growth performance across countries Jaime Ros is Professor of Economics and Faculty Fellow of the Helen Kellogg Institute of International Studies University of Notre Dame

Environment and Ecology in the History of Economic Thought

Vitor Eduardo Schincariol, 2024-07-05 This volume proposes a reconsideration of ecological and environmental aspects of the work and ideas of various heterodox authors and traditions in the history of economic thought including the field of economic development Many of the contributors to this book focus on thinkers and works which are not typically considered as part of the ecological sphere while others consider such economists in a new light or domain Thus the book elucidates a new and useful research field of reconsidering ecological dimensions in the traditional history of economic thought as well as helping to delineate alternative views for ongoing debates on ecological themes Did Veblen Keynes Sraffa C Furtado and other key economists and schools of thought of our age have relevant and useful insights with respect to environmental issues Which aspects of their intellectual legacies should eventually be discarded in the face of our new environmental challenges On the contrary what aspects of their economic theories can be updated and adapted to a better interpretation of our present ecological concerns How do they differ and why The essays contained in this book will help to answer these questions by means of recovering analysing and updating the work of some of the most relevant heterodox economists and schools of thought of our time This book will be of great interest for readers in the history of economic thought ecological economics environmental economics and economic development A New Era of Transformation in Ghana Clemens

Pal,2016-08-10 This book explores in a series of detailed case studies how public policy is actually made in Qatar While Qatar is a Gulf monarchy its governance is complex Other analysts have tried to come to grips with this complexity using qualified descriptions of the system such as late rentier pluralized autocracy tribal democracy or soft authoritarian The authors of the volume use the lens of a transformative state Qatar is deliberately engaged in a rapid process of radical economic and societal transformation That process has its contradictions and tensions particularly with regards to achieving a balance between Islam social traditions and modernity This book explores how it also has a specific policy dynamic of generating ideas and institutions developing policy and program designs implementation and coordination      Flexible Crossroads Roger Hayter, 2011-11-01 British Columbia's forest economy is at a crucial crossroads. Its survival, Roger Hayter argues, rests on its ability to remain flexible and open to innovation, a future by no means assured given recent policy initiatives and the current contested nature of British Columbia's forests. Flexible Crossroads looks at the contemporary restructuring of British Columbia's forest economy, demonstrating how both resource dynamics, the transition from old growth to managed forests, and industrial dynamics, changing technology, and global market forces have shaped this transformation. Conceptually, the restructuring is portrayed as a shift from a commodity-based, cost-minimizing production system (Fordism) to a more product-differentiated, value-maximizing production system informed by the imperative of flexibility. The first part of the book provides global and historical perspectives by situating British Columbia's forest economy within the wider context of global industrialization, the history of resource dynamics, and the current shift from Fordist to more flexible systems of production. In the second part, Hayter assesses the extent to which British Columbia's forest economy is enacting this shift by focusing on factors such as foreign ownership, the strategies and structure of MacMillan Bloedel, the role of small firms, trade relations, employment and labour relations, forest community development, environmentalism, and resource use and innovation policy. Flexible Crossroads will appeal to geographers, political economists, and forestry professionals as well as to students of British Columbia's economy and forest economies generally.
