Coral Reef Restoration Handbook William F. Precht, 2006-05-25 this book is the first to describe in detail the art and science of coral reef restoration It is to be hoped that the information that can be gleaned within the pages of this book will set a path towards continued preservation of this valuable underwater treasure to be used appreciated and experienced for future generations Senator

Integrated Restoration of Forested Ecosystems to Achieve Multiresource Benefits, 2008 A primary mission of the U S Department of Agriculture Forest Service is multiple resource management and one of the emerging themes is forest restoration The National Silviculture Workshop a biennial event co sponsored by the Forest Service was held May 7 10 2007 in Ketchikan Alaska with the theme of Integrated Restoration of Forested Ecosystems to Achieve Multiresource Benefits This proceedings presents a compilation of state of the art silvicultural research and forestry management papers that demonstrates integrated restoration to yield multiple resource benefits These papers highlight national perspectives on ecosystem services forest restoration and climate change and regional perspectives on forest restoration and silvicultural practices to achieve multiple resource benefits from researchers and forest practitioners working in a broad array of forest types in the United States

Marine Ecosystem Restoration (MER) – Challenges and New Horizons Brian Silliman, Avigdor Abelson, Christine Angelini, Gesche Krause, Megan Irene Saunders, Tjisse Van Der Heide, 2023-10-23 Worldwide marine ecosystems have been lost and degraded due to anthropogenic disturbances For example oyster reefs have declined by at least 85% coral reefs by 19% seagrasses by 29% North American salt marshes by 42% and mangroves by 35% from the early 19th century Deepwater reefs and deep sea vents are not immune and have also been reduced in extent in many areas Factors driving these losses include habitat destruction pollution invasive species overfishing trawling mining and more recently climate change effects such as ocean warming species range changes and acidification These habitat declines are occurring at a time when marine waters are being used at or near their maximum productive capacity to meet the contemporary needs of an ever increasing human population Because coastal and marine ecosystems generate some of the richest biodiversity hotspots on Earth and provide critical ecosystem services including storm protection fisheries production and carbon storage over 1 billion US dollars have been spent globally in an attempt to halt and reverse observed declines Early conservation efforts aimed at protecting these valuable and threatened habitats focused on reducing human impacts and physical stressors However with habitat degradation continuing and sometimes increasing in rate it is now clear conservation alone will not be sufficient to protect and reestablish coastal ecosystems Habitat restoration although in existence for many decades has recently been elevated as a new primary strategy to stem and even reverse coastal habitat loss The call for increasing investment in restoration efforts has emerged with significant advances in propagule rearing and dispersion of habitat forming organisms e.g. oysters, seagrasses, corals. In addition, restoration resources are increasingly allocated by governments and/or large corporations with the aim to, for example, fix past landscape engineering efforts that had unintended environmental consequences. Such investments are being made to: i) provide jobs for those unemployed during economic downturns; ii) restore ecosystems destroyed by natural disasters and stressors; iii) increase coastal defense in response to increased frequency of intense storms and/or iv) compensate for pollution and development driven habitat degradation. Conservation practitioners have traditionally been skeptical to invest heavily in restoration at large scales because of the high cost per area (10 000–5 000 000 US ha for coastal vs 500–5 000 US ha for terrestrial systems to replant coastal ecosystems and/or the high chance that the restored ecosystems will not live long, e.g. outplanted corals). For restoration to be effective and employed as a primary method of coastal conservation at relevant scales, we must improve its efficiency, lower costs, and rapidly share and incorporate advances. One crucial step will be to identify when and where restoration attempts have been carried out according to state-of-the-art ecological theory and gauge their success. Another is generating synthesis studies that focus both within and across ecosystems to identify efficiencies, adaptations, and innovations. Work that shows theoretical and methodological innovations in specific ecosystems as well as across systems will be critical to pushing all fields of MER forward. Although there is rapidly increasing interest and investment, the field of marine ecosystem restoration is just beginning to undergo synthesis. Therefore, the aim of this Research Topic is to bring together research contributions to help address this synthesis need, provide a spotlight for recent innovations, enhance our understanding of successful methods in marine ecosystem restoration, and promote integration of ecological, sociological, and engineering theory into restoration practices.

Power System Restoration M. M.

Adibi, 2000-06-22 At a time when bulk power systems operate close to their design limits, the restructuring of the electric power industry has created vulnerability to potential blackouts. Prompt and effective power system restoration is essential for the minimization of downtime and costs to the utility and its customers, which mount rapidly after a system blackout. Power System Restoration meets the complex challenges that arise from the dynamic capabilities of new technology in areas such as large scale system analysis, communication, and control, data management, artificial intelligence, and allied disciplines. It provides an up-to-date description of the restoration methodologies and implementation strategies practiced internationally. The book opens with a general overview of the restoration process and then covers: Techniques used in restoration planning and training; Knowledge based systems as operational aids in restoration; Issues associated with hydro and thermal power plants; High and extra high voltage transmission systems; Restoration of distribution systems. Power System Restoration is essential reading for all power system planners and operating engineers in the power industry. It is also a valuable reference for researchers, practicing power engineers, and engineering students. Sponsored by IEEE Power Engineering Society.

Nature and Environment: The Psychology of Its Benefits and Its Protection Marc Glenn Berman, 2017-04-20 Our Research Topic section entitled Nature and the environment The psychology of its benefits and its protection will have two main lines The first line of articles will center upon cutting edge research showing how interacting with nature can affect health well being and overall improve cognition and affect Articles in this line will stress in what ways nature can improve psychological functioning and health and also discuss the theories and evidence as to why nature can improve psychological functioning For this line we welcome submission of articles that discuss the psychological health and well being benefits from interacting with nature as well as submissions that focus on theoretical considerations and underlying mechanisms that lead to the restorative effects of interacting with nature Given that nature can have a positive impact on psychological functioning and overall health it is also important to understand the variables that facilitate people s recognition of environmental issues that can help foster a more positive attitude towards the preservation of nature This brings us to the second line of articles which will center upon the psychological mechanisms that make individuals more or less likely to accept the seriousness of environmental challenges such as climate change Given the new cutting edge research in this field we may be able to make individuals more proactive in the protection of the environment and more accepting of policy measures required to mitigate climate change We see this research topic as a way for psychological scientists to contribute substantially to an important area of public debate and policy For this line we welcome articles that will focus on ways in which people respond to various framings of policy relevant information and how morality may play into the individuals policy views that center on climate change and environmental protection Energy and Water Development Appropriations for 2006 United States. Congress. House. Committee on Appropriations. Subcommittee on Energy and Water Development, 2005 Biological Invasions in South Africa Brian W. van Wilgen, John Measey, David M. Richardson, John R. Wilson, Tsungai A. Zengeya, 2020-03-10 This open access volume presents a comprehensive account of all aspects of biological invasions in South Africa where research has been conducted over more than three decades and where bold initiatives have been implemented in attempts to control invasions and to reduce their ecological economic and social effects It covers a broad range of themes including history policy development and implementation the status of invasions of animals and plants in terrestrial marine and freshwater environments the development of a robust ecological theory around biological invasions the effectiveness of management interventions and scenarios for the future The South African situation stands out because of the remarkable diversity of the country and the wide range of problems encountered in its varied ecosystems which has resulted in a disproportionate investment into both research and management The South African experience holds many lessons for other parts of the world and this book should be of immense value to researchers students managers and policy makers who deal with biological invasions and ecosystem management and conservation in most other regions Energy and Water Development
