Restructuring The Labour Market Cambridge Studies In Sociology:

Restructuring the Labour Market D. Ashton, M. Maguire, M. Spilsbury, 1990-06-05 This book represents an advance in our knowledge of the labour market For the first time it combines the analysis of both quantitative and qualitative data to produce an explanation of the main changes which have transformed the labour market during the recession For the first time it demonstrates the segmented character of the youth labour market and the significance of the local labour markets The result is a substantial contribution to labour market segmentation theory and to the analysis of social policy in this field

The Vocational Quest Helen Connell, Nicholas Lowe, Malcolm Skilbeck, Kirsten Tait, 2002-02-07 Government attempts in recent years to create a national system of vocational education and training have marked a profound shift both in educational policy and in underlying concepts of what education is for Relations between schools and the working world are changing all the time and the implementation of ideas of vocationalism has forced a blurring of the time honoured boundaries between educations concerned with concepts and training or with skills The challenge now is to define how the schools can give young people the foundations for life in a working world in which they are likely to have to change jobs and where work will fill a smaller proportion of their lives The Vocational Quest maps the evolution of vocationalism in Britain in historical terms and examines how the particular forms that have come into being in the last few years compare with developments in other parts of the world including Continental Europe Japan the United States Australia and New Zealand It argues for new forms of communication and partnership between formal education and training and the wider community in which values will be shared and no one partner will win at the expense of others

Youth and Policy Howard Williamson, 2019-06-04 First published in 1997 this volume is concerned primarily though not exclusively with one particular vulnerable group unqualified young men on the margins These young men whose cultures of machismo manualism and anti mentalism previously served to prepare them for the manual labour market are increasingly the careerless the jobless and the folk devils of the modern post industrial society In research they have received considerable attention though more for their capacity to be spectacular deviant and bizarre than through the deep anxieties and despondency about the future experienced by many Howard Williamson contends that the development of effective youth policy depends essentially upon a synthesis of political priorities professional agendas and young people s perspectives and responses While not quite an underclass many suffer from a tangle of pathologies which obstructs the possibility of them finding a way back into mainstream economic housing and relationship transitions

background the book provides an encompassing comparative analysis of school to work transitions in EU member states It shows how differences in both European education and training systems as well as labour market institutions generated significant variation in the experiences of young people entering European labour markets during the 1990s This book compiles an integrated series of comparative empirical analyses of education to work transitions across the EU by drawing on the European Labour Force Surveys Individual chapters describe the educational background of young people entering the labour market address the scope of educational expansion in recent decades and chart basic structures of transition processes in European labour markets Chapters not only examine the role of education for successful labour market integration but also the impact of macroeconomic structural and institutional factors on young people's chances of avoiding unemployment and attaining employment in occupations appropriate to their education and training From these analyses it becomes apparent that the structure of education and training systems is the key institutional factor behind successful youth labour market integration At the level of intermediate skills dual systems of training have retained their advantages in terms of reduced youth unemployment High levels of education still constitute a key asset for despite significant educational expansion in recent decades devaluation trends have been limited As youth labour markets are found to be particularly responsive to macroeconomic conditions however macroeconomic stability turns out to be an equally important predicament to successful youth labour market integration in particular among those with low levels of education

Stephanie Steinmetz,2011-12-15 This study untangles the complex interplay of individual and contextual factors shaping cross national differences in horizontal and vertical occupational sex segregation It relates the individual factors affecting occupational decisions to the broader social and economic context within a given society Following this approach Stephanie Steinmetz provides a comprehensive overview of the development and causes of cross national differences in occupational sex segregation She offers insights into the positioning of 21 EU Members States particularly of former CCE countries Based on advanced multi level models the study shows that institutional factors such as the organization of educational systems post industrial developments social policies and the national gender culture play a crucial role in shaping sex segregation processes apart from individual factors The author clarifies that a distinct set of institutional factors is relevant to each of the two dimensions of occupational sex segregation and that these factors operate in different directions some reduce horizontal segregation while at the same time aggravating the vertical aspect Finally the study assesses the empirical findings from a political perspective by addressing the future contextual challenges of EU Member States seeking to attain higher gender equality on the labour market Temporary Agency Work and Globalisation

Huiyan Fu,2016-03-03 Despite its geographic and industry expansion as part of the ongoing globalisation of service activity temporary agency work TAW is
