Globalization and New Geographies of Conservation Karl S. Zimmerer, 2006-09-15 Examining the geographical dimensions of environmental management and conservation activities implemented on landscapes worldwide Globalization and New Geographies of Conservation creates a new framework and collects original case studies to explore recent developments in the interaction of humans and their environment Globalization and New Geographies of Conservation makes four important arguments about the recent coupling of conservation and globalization that is reshaping the place of nature in human environmental change First it has led to an unprecedented number of spatial arrangements whose environmental management goals and prescribed activities vary along a spectrum from strict biodiversity protection to sustainable utilization involving agriculture food production and extractive activities Conservation and globalization are also leading by necessity to new scales of management in these activities that rely on environmental science thus shifting the spatial patterning of humans and the environment This interaction results as well in the unprecedented importance of boundaries and borders transnational border issues pose both opportunities and threats to global conservation proposed by organizations and institutions that are themselves international Lastly Globalization and New Geographies of Conservation argues that the local level has been integral to globalization while the regional level is often eclipsed at the peril of the successful implementation of conservation and management programs Bridging the gap between geography and life science Globalization and New Geographies of Conservation will appeal to a broad range of students of the environment conservation planning biodiversity management and development and globalization studies Proceedings of the Warren E. Kronstad Symposium J. Reeves, 2001

Ecological and Practical Applications for Sustainable Agriculture Kuldeep Baudh, Sanjeev Kumar, Rana Pratap Singh, John Korstad, 2020-06-27 Rampant industrialization urbanization and population growth have resulted in increased global environmental contamination The productivity of agricultural soil is drastically deteriorated and requires a high dose of fertilizers to cultivate crops To ensure food security farmers are compelled to apply excess chemical fertilizers and insecticides that contaminate soil air and water Heavy loads of chemical fertilizers not only degrade the quality of agricultural land but also pollute water and air Use of chemical fertilizers also accelerate the release of greenhouse gases like nitrous oxide and methane along with nutrient runoff from the watershed in to lower elevation rivers and lakes resulting in cultural eutrophication Farming practices globally in developed developing and under developing countries should utilize and promote sustainable methods through viable combined environmental social and economic means that improve rather than harm future generations This can include use of non synthetic fertilizers like compost vermicompost slow release fertilizers farmyard manures crop rotations that include nitrogen fixing legumes Organic fertilizers like compost and vermicompost improve soil properties like texture porosity water holding capacity organic matter as well as nutrient availability The purpose of this book is to document the available alternatives of synthetic fertilizers their mode of action efficiency preparation methodology practical suggestions for sustainable practices and needed research focus The book will cover major disciplines like plant science environmental science agricultural science agricultural biotechnology and microbiology horticulture soil science atmospheric science agro forestry agronomy and ecology This book is helpful for farmers scientists industrialists research scholars masters and graduate students non governmental organizations financial advisers and policy makers
