The Shadow of an Airplane Climbs the Empire State Building

A World Theory of Film
Parker Tyler

A world theory of film.... A presumptuous undertaking, it would seem, and in the hands of a lesser critic, an impossible one. But in this volume our most distinguished philosopher of film has, in fact, formulated a universal theory, one which embraces all works of film art. It is Parker Tyler's most important book.

The substance of this world theory concerns the relation between art and life, between film and experience. Mr. Tyler addresses himself to the special nature of film time and film space, and shows how they differ from the dimensions of ordinary experience. At the same time, though, his theory is closely rooted in the real world: just as the image of an airplane's shadow moving up the Empire State Building becomes for this writer a filmic metaphor, so life imitates art.

Mr. Tyler shows the special relationship between film and television,

How to Read a Film James Monaco, 1977

The Rhapsodes David Bordwell, 2016-04-04 An engaging look at four pioneering film critics besides being a pleasure to read it makes a sophisticated contribution to the study of film criticism Cineaste In the 1960s Pauline Kael Andrew Sarris and Roger Ebert were three of America s most popular and influential film critics But their remarkable contributions to the cinema landscape were deeply influenced by the work of four earlier critics who are too often overlooked Otis Ferguson James Agee Manny Farber and Parker Tyler Throughout the 30s and 40s these pioneering critics scrutinized movies with an intensity not previously seen in popular reviewing With The Rhapsodes renowned film scholar and critic David Bordwell restores their work to a wider audience Bordwell calls these four critics the Rhapsodes in honor of their passionate and deliberately offbeat prose Each broke with prevailing currents in criticism finding new ways to discuss popular films that their contemporaries regarded as trivial With his customary clarity and brio Bordwell considers each critics writing style their conceptions of films and their many quarrels He then concludes by examining their profound impact on later generations of film writers

The Address of the Eye Vivian Sobchack, 2020-05-05 Cinema is a sensuous object but in our presence it becomes also a sensing sensual sense making subject Thus argues Vivian Sobchack as she challenges basic assumptions of current film theory that reduce film to an object of vision and the spectator to a victim of a deterministic cinematic apparatus Maintaining that these premises ignore the material and cultural historical situations of both the spectator and the film the author makes the radical proposal that the cinematic experience depends on two viewers viewing the spectator and the film each existing as both subject and object of vision Drawing on existential and semiotic phenomenology and particularly on the work of Merleau

Ponty Sobchack shows how the film experience provides empirical insight into the reversible dialectical and signifying nature of that embodied vision we each live daily as both mine and another's. In this attempt to account for cinematic intelligibility and signification the author explores the possibility of human choice and expressive freedom within the bounds of history and culture.

The Production of Culture Diane Crane, 1992-05-14 The phrase production of culture is concerned with how the organizations in which culture is produced and disseminated affect the nature of culture itself. Yet there is no clear consensus on what is meant by this phrase. Crane, in reviewing and synthesizing current research, provides a systematic and accessible approach to this complex subject. She examines the issue on both popular and elite levels. The reader is thus allowed to see how the notion of production changes depending on the size of the audience and the structure of the particular cultural industry. Library Journal, 1972-10
