Cities, Nature and Development Sarah Dooling, Gregory Simon, 2016-05-23 Bringing together an interdisciplinary team of scholars this book illustrates how and why cities are comprised by a mosaic of vulnerable human and ecological communities Case studies ranging across various international settings reveal how urban vulnerabilities is an effective metaphor and analytic lens for advancing political ecological theories on the relationships between cities nature and development Contributions expand upon conceptions of vulnerability as a static condition and instead present vulnerability as a phenomenon that is produced through complex and contentious planning histories and which may in turn be politicized exploited and in some instances contested Expanding upon snapshot vulnerability assessments this volume articulates vulnerability as a process that is marked by the accumulation of risk over time and the transference of risk across space and populations Moving beyond notions of vulnerability as a singular case studies demonstrate that social and ecological vulnerabilities are deeply integrated and as such are irreducible to one or the other This volume also highlights how the production of vulnerabilities is frequently achieved through integrated and mutually reinforcing economic development and environmentally driven agendas This collection thus suggests that vulnerability and also forms of resilience are implicated in efforts to plan for and manage sustainable cities This book provides timely and provocative perspectives on a wide range of urban issues including park management gentrification suburban expansion sustainability planning local organic food systems hazards management climate change activism and north south flows of urban environmental externalities Collectively these works reveal the complexities of urban vulnerabilities related to scalar interactions accumulation and transfer of risk politicization and governance and capacity for resistance and in doing so provide readers with coherent robust and well theorized analysis of the politics and production of urban vulnerabilities

Village Work Alice Wiemers,2021-05-28 A robust historical case study that demonstrates how village development became central to the rhetoric and practice of statecraft in rural Ghana Combining oral histories with decades of archival material Village Work formulates a sweeping history of twentieth century statecraft that centers on the daily work of rural people local officials and family networks rather than on the national governments and large scale plans that often dominate development stories Wiemers shows that developmentalism was not simply created by governments and imposed on the governed instead it was jointly constructed through interactions between them The book contributes to the historiographies of development and statecraft in Africa and the Global South by emphasizing the piecemeal contingent and largely improvised ways both development and the state are comprised and experienced providing new entry points into longstanding discussions about developmental power and discourse unsettling common ideas about how and by whom states are made exposing the importance of unpaid labor in mediating relationships between governments and the governed showing how state engagement could both exacerbate and disrupt inequities Despite massive changes in twentieth century political structures the imposition and destruction of colonial rule nationalist plans for pan African solidarity and modernization multiple military coups and the rise of neoliberal austerity policies unremunerated labor and demonstrations of local leadership have remained central tools by which rural Ghanaians have interacted with the state Grounding its analysis of statecraft in decades of daily negotiations over budgets and bureaucracy the book tells the stories of developers who decided how and where projects would be sited of constituents who performed labor and of a chief and his large cadre of educated children who met and shaped demands for local leaders For a variety of actors invoking the village became a convenient way to allocate or attract limited resources to highlight or downplay struggles over power and to forge national and international networks

Forests Are Gold Pamela D. McElwee, 2016-04-01. Forests Are Gold examines the management of Vietnam's forests in the tumultuous twentieth century from French colonialism to the recent transition to market oriented economics as the country united, prospered and transformed people and landscapes. Seeing Like a Citizen Kara Moskowitz, 2019-11-12. In Seeing Like a Citizen, Kara Moskowitz approaches Kenya's late colonial and early postcolonial eras as a single period of political, economic and social transition. In focusing on rural Kenyans, the vast majority of the populace and the main targets of development interventions as they actively sought access to aid, she offers new insights into the texture of political life in decolonizing Kenya and the early postcolonial world. Using multisited archival sources and oral histories focused on the western Rift Valley, Seeing Like a Citizen makes three fundamental contributions to our understanding of African and Kenyan history. First, it challenges the widely accepted idea of the gatekeeper state, revealing that state control remained limited and that the postcolonial state was an internally varied and often dissonant institution. Second, it transforms our understanding of postcolonial citizenship, showing that its balance of rights and duties was neither claimed nor imposed but negotiated and differentiated Third it reorients Kenyan historiography away from central Kenya and elite postcolonial politics The result is a powerful investigation of experiences of independence of the meaning and form of development and of how global political practices were composed and recomposed on the ground in local settings
