Department of Oriental Printed Books and Manuscripts,Alexander George Ellis,1894 The Return of the Storyteller in Contemporary Fiction Areti Dragas,2014-08-31 Focusing on the figure of the storyteller this study breaks new ground in the approach to reading contemporary literature by identifying a growing interest in storytelling For the last thirty years contemporary fiction has been influenced by theoretical discourses textuality and writing Only since the rise of postcolonialism have academic critics been more overtly interested in stories where high theory frameworks are less applicable However as we move through various contemporary contexts engaging with postcolonial identities and hybridity to narratives of disability and evolutionary accounts of group and individual survival a common feature of all is the centrality of story which posits both the idea of survival and the passing on of traditions The Return of the Storyteller in Contemporary Fiction closely examines this preoccupation with story and storytelling through a close reading of six contemporary international novelists that are either about actual storytellers or engage with the figure of the storyteller revealing how death of the author has given birth to the storyteller The Sheik; A Novel Edith Maude Hull,2025-08-16 Reproduction of the original The Antigonos publishing house specialises in the publication of reprints of historical books We make sure that these works are made available to the public in good condition

Literary Secularism Amardeep Singh, 2008-12-18 Literary Secularism Religion and Modernity in Twentieth Century Fiction shows the path to secularization in the modern novel in comparative perspective Writers as diverse as George Eliot James Joyce Salman Rushdie Orhan Pamuk Taslima Nasrin and James Wood have all struggled with religious orthodoxy in their personal lives and are some of the most important and representative secular writers in the modern world canon But their novels which are far more than mere anti religious manifestos directly reflect the continued power of religious communities and institutions in the modern world While religion is in a very real sense displaced from epistemological centrality in modernity all of these writers suggest that religious texts rituals and communities have a force that is in George Eliot s words still throbbing in modern life In a series of close readings Literary Secularism argues that the intimate often deeply ambivalent representation of religion is a key feature of modern writing and is central to the larger intellectual and historical project of modernity Literary Secularism is then a complex literary ethos which impinges as much on style language and novelistic form as on theme The close readings here of novels such as George Eliot s Daniel Deronda Rabindranath Tagore s Gora James Joyce s Ulysses and Salman Rushdie s The Satanic Verses all hinge on the ambiguity of religious and secular discourses In some cases the ambiguity is expressed through the affective and embodied experience of the protagonists whose private subjectivity often conflicts with their public identities The conflict between present and private is also explored in a dedicated chapter on secularism and feminism in India as well as with regard to the global crisis of secularism that has emerged following the terrorist attacks of 9 11 While the particular experiences of the various narratives vary somewhat from author to author all of the authors in this study are interested in defining a way of being secular that no sociological or ideological formula can fully describe Correspondingly while works of literature are certainly artifacts marking key moments in the history of secularisation literature by itself doesn t produce secularism in either the cultural or the political context In arguing for the literary as a historically specific social and cultural mode of secularity Literary Secularism offers a unique perspective on the problem of secularisation that may be of interest to fields such as literary criticism religious studies the sociology of religion and political theory
