Full Writings - Metropolitan Antony (Khrapovitsky) - Vol. 2 - 3 Metr. Antony (Khrapovitsky), Wealth without work, Pleasure without conscience, Science without humanity, Knowledge without character, Politics without principle, Commerce without morality, Worship without sacrifice. <https://vidjambov.blogspot.com/2023/01/book-inventory/vladimir-djambov-talmach.html> In our Russian public life it was just such a fall as in the life of Peter, One writer who fought against the enemies of Christ by the power of philosophical and then apologetic research was apparently upset that the truth itself conquers the enemies so slowly and so imperceptibly. It was probably bitter for him to see Christ's faith neglected by high society and trampled down with impunity by the nihilists depraving youths and now instead of working through spiritual grace and science to achieve such spiritual gifts through the grace of God before which the wiles of the enemies of Christ would fall, this thinker began to think about the organization of such public church-state orders in which no one could enslave or insult the church in which the power of the church would act unhindered and triumphantly defeated its enemies. If he had learned and taught us for this purpose to become Chrysostom or Gregory to acquire the love of John the Theologian or the power of the Apostle Paul, oh then who would not thank him! But he began to look for other means, state dispensations, he drew a sword like Peter and perishes, noting lies and ruins his followers. He fell into that terrible pit of delusions where any zealot of the church would naturally fall out of reason, he gradually and consistently began to lean toward the doctrine that elevated violence into law, into that terrible ditch of papism which having begun to be jealous of Christ outwardly expelled Him from his society and put the sinful man in place of Christ. Now we have to state the very rebirth of man according to Dostoevsky from the side of the influence of one will on another. Our writer has a very conscious view of this subject, he is not limited to an artistically correct but impartial description of two or three cases of conversion like Leo Tolstoy in his last two novels where the heroes like Levin, Bezukhov, and Volynsky under very vague influences come to uncertain results having established themselves firmly only in condemnation of former selfishness and determination to follow a compassionate feeling. True, there is a considerable artistic and philosophical merit in this so Tolstoy himself looks at such types as the most important in his work but they are in his thick novels like two or three odorous violets in a huge bouquet of beautiful but devoid of zapaxa flowers Dostoevsky s as said all primary and secondary heroes revolve around their conscience and call for repentance and renewal as many planets circle in different orbits around one sun Let us add now that the striking richness of the content of his many stories is not created by the heterogeneity of types and the differences between the described areas of their inner life no his planets are not numerous and the orbits of the revolutions remain the same but the artist painting in different stories and in different faces the same types it changes their position in the orbit of life that is when they turn to the moral sun either on one or the other side One and the same character but in different positions and ages at different levels of his conversion or on the contrary bitterness goes through a dozen stories with him so Raskolnikov is the same Ivan Karamazov the Old Prince of the Humiliated is the same Fedor Pavlovich Karamazov and Versilov the mother of Raskolnikov and the mother of the Teenager the father of the latter and Stavrogin Demons the husband of Krotkoy and the husband Akulkin in Dead House etc etc are all variants of several few types Dostoevsky also has few plots with the plot and denouement whether there are a dozen or so plots and types hardly And if for all that the reader not only does not notice the repetitions and does not feel bored when reading his stories but on the contrary becomes even more interested in them the more he has already read them then it is clear that the variety of material that has manifested itself in such a variety of materials all stages of spiritual development this kind of table of multiplication of a polynomial by a polynomial executed by the author sinfully in other words he was able with complete life truth to depict the whole ladder of spiritual struggle with each direction of his own type and this is only given to someone who combines an artist with a connoisseur of the laws of the phenomena described that is a psychologist and even a theologian For the reader who wants to check the author the completeness of his essays is especially convenient because it completely eliminates the suspicion of an accidental individual character of one or other changes in the inner life of literary heroes but gives the author s foundations just mathematical convincingness if all characters are of different ages genders and provisions thus referring to the well known call of life came to complete inner harmony and began to bring happiness and love everywhere referring the opposite about instantly became on the road to suicide and from the middle path they were opposed by will against their own system of their own nature it is clear and mathematically incontrovertible that the first path is the right path the only one saving etc The same certainty of views is established by Dostoevsky on the question of the reviving influence of one will on another and it will not be difficult to verify that based on such certainty the author has some theological and metaphysical ideas although as said does not subordinate them to reality but deduces the first from the last one or even himself does not output and unconsciously guided by them in their creative work to authorize the following conclusions readers themselves
