Natural Magic Renée Bergland,2024-04-30 A captivating portrait of the poet and the scientist who shared an enchanted view of nature Emily Dickinson and Charles Darwin were born at a time when the science of studying the natural world was known as natural philosophy a pastime for poets priests and schoolgirls The world began to change in the 1830s while Darwin was exploring the Pacific aboard the Beagle and Dickinson was a student in Amherst Massachusetts Poetry and science started to grow apart and modern thinkers challenged the old orthodoxies offering thrilling new perspectives that suddenly felt radical and too dangerous for women Natural Magic intertwines the stories of these two luminary nineteenth century minds whose thought and writings captured the awesome possibilities of the new sciences and at the same time strove to preserve the magic of nature Just as Darwin s work was informed by his roots in natural philosophy and his belief in the interconnectedness of all life Dickinson s poetry was shaped by her education in botany astronomy and chemistry and by her fascination with the enchanting possibilities of Darwinian science Casting their two very different careers in an entirely fresh light Ren e Bergland brings to life a time when ideas about science were rapidly evolving reshaped by poets scientists philosophers and theologians alike She paints a colorful portrait of a remarkable century that transformed how we see the natural world Illuminating and insightful Natural Magic explores how Dickinson and Darwin refused to accept the separation of art and science Today more than ever we need to reclaim their shared sense of ecological wonder

Instruments and the Imagination Thomas L. Hankins, Robert J. Silverman, 2014-07-14 Thomas Hankins and Robert Silverman investigate an array of instruments from the seventeenth through the nineteenth century that seem at first to be marginal to science: magnetic clocks that were said to operate by the movements of sunflower seeds; magic lanterns; ocular harpsichords; machines that played different colored lights in harmonious mixtures; Aeolian harps; a form of wind chime; and other instruments of natural magic designed to produce wondrous effects. By looking at these and the first recording instruments, the stereoscope and speaking machines, the authors show that scientific instruments first made their appearance as devices used to evoke wonder in the beholder as in works of magic and the theater. The authors also demonstrate that these instruments, even though they were often tricks, were seen by their inventors as more than trickery. In the view of Athanasius Kircher, for instance, the sunflower clock was not merely a hoax but an effort to demonstrate, however fraudulently, his truly held belief that the ability of a flower to follow the sun was due to the same cosmic magnetic influence as that which moved the planets and caused the rotation of the earth. The marvels revealed in this work raise and answer questions about the connections between natural science and natural magic, the meaning of demonstration, the role of language and the senses in science, and the connections among art, music, literature, and natural science. Originally published in 1995, The Princeton Legacy Library uses the latest print-on-demand technology to again make available previously out-of-print books from the distinguished backlist of Princeton University Press. These editions preserve the original texts of these important books while presenting them in durable paperback and hardcover editions. The goal of the Princeton Legacy Library is to vastly increase access to the rich scholarly heritage found in the thousands of books published by Princeton University Press since its founding in 1905. Natural Magick Giambattista Della Porta, Richard Active, 1650-1680 Gaywood, Thomas Active, 1658 Young, 2021-09-09 This work has been selected by scholars as being culturally important and is part of the knowledge base of civilization as we know it.
