Natural Museums:

Natural Museums Kathy S. Mason, 2004-08-31 In 1872 the world's first national park was founded at Yellowstone. Although ideas of nature conservation were not embraced generally by the American public, five more parks were created before the turn of the century. By 1916 the year that the National Park Service was born, the country could boast of fourteen national parks including such celebrated areas as Yosemite and Sequoia. Kathy Mason demonstrates that Congress, park superintendents, and the American public were forming general, often tacit notions of the parks' purpose before the new bureau was established. Although the Park Service recently has placed some emphasis on protecting samples of North America's ecosystems, the earliest national parks were viewed as natural museums, monuments to national grandeur that would edify visitors. Not only were these early parks to preserve monumental and unique natural attractions, but they also had to be of no use to mining, lumbering, agriculture, and other productive industries. Natural Museums examines the notions of park monumentalism, worthlessness, and national significance, as well as the parks' roles as wilderness preserves and recreational centers.

Nature's Museums Carla Yanni, 2005-09-09 Yanni, art history, Rutgers U, examines the relationship between architecture and science in the 19th century by considering the physical placement and display of natural artifacts in Victorian natural history museums. She begins by discussing the problem of classification, the social history of collecting, as well as architectural competitions.

Directory of Museums Kenneth Hudson, Ann Nicholls, 1975-06-18 A Companion to Museum Studies Sharon Macdonald, 2011-08-24 A Companion to Museum Studies captures the multidisciplinary approach to the study of the development, roles, and significance of museums in contemporary society. Collects first-rate original essays by leading figures from a range of disciplines and theoretical stances, including anthropology, art history, history, literature, sociology, cultural studies, and museum studies. Examines the complexity of the museum from cultural, political, curatorial, historical, and representational perspectives. Covers traditional subjects such as space, display, buildings, objects, and collecting, and more contemporary challenges such as visiting commerce, community, and experimental exhibition forms.
