

BACKYARD BIRDING

Whether you live in a downtown apartment with a shared backyard or a country cottage with an extensive garden, birding can begin at home.

Through the seasons, people have delighted in observing the activities of the birds. Appreciating the bird around their homes. Then, to be sure, they have been a source of joy and wonder, and a source of contemplation.

Providing food, water, and nesting sites for birds in your yard will significantly increase opportunities for observing them. It will also help many species that in recent years have struggled to find suitable nesting and foraging habitat.

HENRY DAVID THOREAU

Some of the most interesting accounts of backyard birding yet recorded in Western culture are the sketches written for the nineteenth-century naturalist and philosopher, Henry David Thoreau. The writer of 18 essays explores the relationship between humans and nature.

Thoreau, detailed notes on activities of the birds found around Thoreau's garden. He noted the constraints and variety of a commercial society in 1840. Thoreau retreated to the woods to conduct an experiment in living. For two years, he lived in a cabin which he had built on the shores of Walden Pond near Concord in Massachusetts. Here he spent many hours contemplating the wonders of nature. With time, human contact during these years, the woodland birds became his constant companions and he devoted much of his writing to observations of their behavior.

In birds, he discovered kindred spirits, and he marveled at the simplicity and freedom of their lives. The experience at Walden gave rise to a lifelong fascination with birds and ultimately shaped Thoreau's philosophy on nature.

SAVE FOOD Consider providing water when winter weather makes it difficult to find enough water to see them through the long winter.

SETTING UP A FEEDER STATION Birds have a number of requirements. They need food, water, protection from predators, and somewhere to roost. All these needs can be carried for in an average garden, even in urban areas.

For your feeder station to be as effective as possible, it's important that you choose appropriate foods, present them in the right way, and make sure your station is well protected.

To further assist local birds and increase opportunities for observing bird behavior, you may also decide to put up a station or even. And, if you have the space, cultivating trees and other plants will help some your yard into a naturally wildlife refuge. There is sufficient guidance in the following pages to get you started with backyard birding, but always try to learn from the birds themselves. Each area of the country has its own species, even species has different requirements, and individual birds will act in different ways. Creating the perfect environment for local birds will involve trial and error. Don't become discouraged. The rewards for both bird and bird are great.

BIRD CAMERAS Bird cameras can help document bird behavior in your yard. They can also be used to monitor bird health.

OBSERVING BIRDS IN THE YARD Backyard birding can provide you with a rich insight into the life cycle of birds.

PROJECT INFORMATION

One way of getting your backyard birding experience to go further is to become involved in Project Information. This is part of the Laboratory of Ornithology at Cornell University. Project Information is a program of the Cornell University Ornithology Department. It is a program that provides scientific data to the Laboratory of Ornithology at Cornell University. Birds generally follow a regular routine. They do the same things—feeding, preening, bathing—at the same time, and for the same length of time, each day. Even if you only attract a few common species, being able to watch them in different stages of the day, for as long as you want is a great way to learn more about them.

Watching birds in the yard will also help you learn your identification skills. In the field, most songbirds move quickly and keep their distance from humans. Difficult to see, they are even harder to watch. Feeders and nestboxes bring the birds to the observer, and if the birds feel well protected, they will become confident enough to spend long periods close to buildings and people. This makes it far easier for you identify them and learn about them by recording field guides like our 14 Birdfinder (p. 84).
