

"As I started out on my regular 'three-miler' I was confronted, this morning, by a landscape made mysterious by a blanket of silvery sea fog which had settled down during the night, a marine phenomenon of surprising beauty, a cool, delicate vapourous covering that subtly alters the entire appearance of the outdoor scene, softens outlines, and produces a muting, not only of colours, but also of the sounds of traffic from nearby Marine Drive. A magical world in which to walk at leisure on a winter's morning."
