The Nature of Learning Disabilities Kenneth A. Kavale, 1995 The Nature of Learning Disabilities Kenneth A. Kavale, Steven R. Forness, 2012-12-06 The category of learning disabilities continues to be among the most contentious in special education Much of the debate and dissent emanates from a lack of understanding about its basic nature The failure to evolve a comprehensive and unified perspective about the nature of learning disabilities has resulted in the concept being lost The loss is best illustrated through the failure to answer this seemingly simple question What is a learning disability Using historical empirical theoretical conceptual and philosophical analyses this volume explores a number of problems and issues facing the field of learning disabilities The chapters cover historical influences definitional problems primary characteristics assessment practices theoretical development major themes research and measurement models and long term outcomes The goal is to explicate the nature of learning disabilities by analyzing what it was supposed to be what it has become and what it might be A predominant theme running through this text is the necessity for the field of learning disabilities to regain integrity by recapturing its essence Equal Educational Opportunity Project Series United States Commission on Civil Rights, 1997 Neuropsychological Perspectives on Learning Disabilities in the Era of RTI Elaine Fletcher-Janzen, Cecil R. Mayes, 2023-01-24 How special education used disability labels to marginalize Black students in public schools The Unteachables examines the overrepresentation of Black students in special education over the course of the twentieth century. As African American children integrated predominantly white schools, many were disproportionately labeled educable mentally retarded (EMR), learning disabled (LD), and emotionally/behaviorally disordered (EBD). Keith A. Mayes charts the evolution of disability categories and how these labels kept Black learners segregated in American classrooms. The civil rights and the educational disability rights movements, Mayes shows, have both collaborated and worked at cross purposes since the beginning of school desegregation. Disability rights advocates built upon the opportunity provided by the civil rights movement to make claims about student invisibility at the level of intellectual and cognitive disabilities. Although special education ostensibly included children from all racial groups, educational disability rights advocates focused on the needs of white disabled students, while school systems used disability discourses to malign and marginalize Black students. From the 1940s to the present, social science researchers, policymakers, school administrators, and teachers have each contributed to the overrepresentation of Black students in special education. Excavating the deep-seated racism embedded in both the public school system and public policy, The Unteachables explores the discriminatory labeling of Black students and how it indelibly contributed to special education disproportionality, to student discipline and push-out practices, and to the school-to-prison pipeline effect.

Equal Educational Opportunity and Nondiscrimination for Students with Disabilities, 1997. This report focuses on issues relating to the development of individualized education programs for and placement of students who are classified as having mental retardation, learning disabilities, behavioral disabilities, or serious emotional disturbances. The U.S. Commission on Civil Rights examined present-day barriers and inequities that deny students with these types of disabilities an equal opportunity to participate in educational programs. The report analyzes and evaluates the Office for Civil Rights (OCR) implementation, compliance, and enforcement efforts for Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act. It discusses other Federal disability laws such as the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) and Title II of the Americans with Disabilities Act to the extent that they relate to Section 504.
