KIPLING, 2018 The Naulahka Rudyard Kipling, 1899 The Naulahka Rudyard Kipling, 2015-07-04 Excerpt from The Naulahka A Story of West and East Kate Sheriff had lived with her face to the west and with her smouldering eyes fixed upon the wilderness since she could walk She had advanced into the wilderness with the railroad Until she had gone away to school she had never lived where the railroad ran both ways She had often stayed long enough at the end of a section with her family to see the first glimmering streaks of the raw dawn of civilization usually helped out by the electric light but in the new and still newer lands to which her father's civil engineering orders called them from year to year there were not even arc lamps There was a saloon under a tent and there was the section house where they lived and where her mother had sometimes taken to board the men employed by her husband But it was not these in uences alone that had produced the young woman of twenty three who sat near Tarvin and who had just told him gently that she liked him but that she had a duty elsewhere This duty as she conceived it was brie y to spend her life in the East in the effort to better the condition of the women of India It had come to her as an inspiration and a command two years before toward the end of her second year at the St About the Publisher
