ABOUT THE CENTER ON CRIME, COMMUNITIES & CULTURE

The goal of the Center on Crime, Communities & Culture is to create a better understanding of and support for effective and humane responses to criminal behavior and victimization. The Center works toward this goal by seeking and supporting outstanding and innovative programs in the field of criminal justice; by providing fellowships to individuals committed to becoming leaders in criminal justice; and by performing policy and research work in areas of national and international importance.

Through its Research Department, the Center seeks to redirect the criminal justice debate away from political preferences and short-term solutions toward the best available evidence on the vital issues in the field. The Center's research is safeguarded when additional resources are needed.
