Patient Lover:

Fairbairn's Object Relations Theory in the Clinical Setting David P. Celani, 2010 W R D Fairbairn 1889 1964 challenged the dominance of Freud's drive theory with a psychoanalytic theory based on the internalization of human relationships. Fairbairn assumed that the unconscious develops in childhood and contains dissociated memories of parental neglect, insensitivity, and outright abuse that are impossible for the children to tolerate consciously. In Fairbairn's model, these dissociated memories protect developing children from recognizing how badly they are being treated and allow them to remain attached even to physically abusive parents. Attachment is paramount in Fairbairn's model as he recognized that children are absolutely and unconditionally dependent on their parents. Kidnapped children who remain attached to their abusive captors despite opportunities to escape illustrate this intense dependency even into adolescence. At the heart of Fairbairn's model is a structural theory that organizes actual relational events into three self and object pairs: one conscious pair, the central ego which relates exclusively to the ideal object in the external world; and two mostly unconscious pairs, the child's antilibidinal ego which relates exclusively to the rejecting parts of the object, and the child's libidinal ego which relates exclusively to the exciting parts of the object. The two dissociated self and object pairs remain in the unconscious but can emerge and suddenly take over the individual's central ego. When they emerge, the other is misperceived as either an exciting or a rejecting object, thus turning these internal structures into a source of transferences and reenactments. Fairbairn's central defense mechanism, splitting, is the fast shift from central ego dominance to either the libidinal ego or the antilibidinal ego, a near-perfect model of the borderline personality disorder. In this book, David Celani reviews Fairbairn's five foundational papers and outlines their application in the clinical setting. He discusses the four unconscious structures and offers the clinician concrete suggestions on how to recognize and respond to them effectively in the heat of the clinical interview. Incorporating decades of experience into his analysis, Celani emphasizes the internalization of the therapist as a new good object and devotes entire sections to the treatment of histrionic, obsessive, and borderline personality disorders.

Therapists Who Have Sex With Their Patients Herbert S. Streehan, 2018-10-24 First published in 1994. Therapists who use and abuse their power make for high talk show ratings and tabloid sales, but are these people simply to be written off as sick and evil? Dr. Herbert Streehan believes not. In this unflinchingly honest book, Dr. Streehan, who has treated such abusive caregivers many times in his practice, seeks to create a more humane portrait of therapists who have affairs with their patients. Central to the book are four fascinating case studies of therapists: Ronald S is a heterosexual psychiatrist with homosexual fantasies who wants to be a woman with his own male therapist; Roslyn M is a therapist who administers love treatment in the therapy room and charges for it; Bob W is a promiscuous sex addict who thinks, despite his physical unattractiveness, that all his women patients hunger for him; Al G is a sadomasochistic social worker who makes his female ex-patients suffer. These cases give voice to the feelings, fantasies, and dreams of therapists who have crossed the boundary. Through them, we come to understand that it is treatment not punishment that will prevent others from falling prey to healers who are themselves in desperate need of healing
