Resource allocation for institutions of higher, education William B. Simpson,     Organizational Assumptions of Resource Allocation in Higher Education Larry Donnithorne, 1986     A Conspicuous Production Theory of Resource Allocation in Higher Education Maw Lin Lee, David W. Stevens, Richard L. Wallace, Missouri. University, Columbia. College of Administration and Public Affairs, 1974     A resource allocation and planning model for higher education Robert Arthur Wallhaus, Western Interstate Commission for Higher Education, 1971     Higher Education Reform in China W. John Morgan, Bin Wu, 2011-03-31 A major transformation of Chinese higher education HE has taken place over the past decade China has reshaped its higher education sector from elite to mass education with the number of graduates having quadrupled to three million a year over six years China is exceptional among lower income countries in using tertiary education as a development strategy on such a scale aiming to improve the quality of its graduates and make HE available to as many of its citizens as possible This book provides a critical examination the challenges to the development and sustainability of higher education in China Can its universities move from quantity to quality How will so many graduates find jobs in line with their expectations Can Britain and other western countries continue to benefit from China s education boom What are the prospects for collaboration in research This book evaluates the prospects for Chinese and foreign HE providers regulators and other stakeholders It introduces the key changes in China s HE programme since the Opening Up policy in 1978 and analyses the achievements and the challenges over the subsequent three decades Furthermore it sheds light on new reforms that are likely to take place in the future particularly as a result of the ongoing international financial crisis     Institutional resource allocation models in higher education Khateeb M. Hussain,1976     Governing Higher Education: National Perspectives on Institutional Governance Alberto Amaral,Glen Jones,B. Karseth,2013-11-11 Over the last decades higher education has gone through an unprecedented growth period and as a result the average university or college has now more students and a larger output than ever before At the same time the socio economic and political demands with respect to higher education have grown dramatically These developments have taken place without a proportional increase of the budgets and facilities of the higher education institutions This has created an imbalance between the expectations with respect to higher education and the institutional capacities in the sector One of the underlying trends is that the traditional pact between higher education and society has become problematic Society no longer accepts the rather special and protected position that universities have had for a very long time in our societies The knowledge based social and cultural missions of higher education institutions are no longer taken for granted as the main legitimacy bases for public investments in higher education Universities and colleges are at present expected to function efficiently to contribute to sustainable economic growth at various levels and to add to national and even supranational trade balances On top of this they have to prove that they maintain a high level of quality in their primary activities i e teaching research and services while adapting and responding to the expectations expressed so vehemently in their environments and to a decreasing per capita funding basis
