Economics Shashi Kant, Janaki Alavalapati, 2014-04-03 It is increasingly recognized that the economic value of forests is not merely the production of timber. Forests provide other key ecosystem services such as being sinks for greenhouse gases, hotspots of biodiversity, tourism and recreation. They are also vitally important in preventing soil erosion and controlling water supplies as well as providing non-timber forest products and supporting the livelihoods of many local people. This handbook provides a detailed, comprehensive and broad coverage of forest economics including traditional forest economics of timber production, economics of environmental role of forests and recent developments in forest economics. The chapters are grouped into six parts: fundamental topics in forest resource economics, economics of forest ecosystems, economics of forests, climate change and bioenergy, economics of risk, uncertainty and natural disturbances, economics of forest property rights and certification, and emerging issues and developments. Written by leading environmental forest and natural resource economists, the book represents a definitive reference volume for students of economics, environment, forestry and natural resource economics and management. Using Experimental Methods in Environmental and Resource Economics John A. List, 2007-01-01 This book explores frontier work at the intersection of experimental and environmental economics. It focuses on improving benefit-cost analysis, which remains the hallmark of public policy decision making around the globe. Each chapter is followed by a list of major concepts and their brief elaborations Charts and diagrams have been frequently used to complement textual analysis Some numerical problems are worked out on important topics Water Resources Allocation Phoebe Koundouri, 2010-10-29 The dilemma facing Cyprus that of limited water supplies both in terms of quantity and quality in the face of steadily increasing water demand coupled with a fragmented institutional structure of the water sector is characteristic of most arid and semi arid countries all over the world Another common characteristic of Cyprus is that the water management administrative boundaries there do not coincide with the hydrological ones while the ongoing political problem of the island creates significant administration problems
