Moore, Holly F. Mathews, 2001-09-06 The essays in this volume first published in 2001 focus upon the relationship of individual experience to culture and chart a research agenda for psychological anthropology in the twenty first century Drawing upon fieldwork in diverse cultural settings the authors use a range of contemporary perspectives in the field including person centred ethnography activity theory attachment theory and cultural schema theory to describe the ways in which people think feel remember and solve problems Fascinating insights emerge from these fine grained accounts of personal experience The research demonstrates that it is possible to identify cross cultural universals in psychological development and mental states and that individual psychology is not determined solely by unique cultural patterns Strangers in the Ethnic Homeland Takeyuki Tsuda, 2003-04-30 Since the late 1980s Brazilians of Japanese descent have been return migrating to Japan as unskilled foreign workers With an immigrant population currently estimated at roughly 280 000 Japanese Brazilians are now the second largest group of foreigners in Japan Although they are of Japanese descent most were born in Brazil and are culturally Brazilian As a result they have become Japan s newest ethnic minority Drawing upon close to two years of multisite fieldwork in Brazil and Japan Takeyuki Tsuda has written a comprehensive ethnography that examines the ethnic experiences and reactions of both Japanese Brazilian immigrants and their native Japanese hosts In response to their socioeconomic marginalization in their ethnic homeland Japanese Brazilians have strengthened their Brazilian nationalist sentiments despite becoming members of an increasingly well integrated transnational migrant community Although such migrant nationalism enables them to resist assimilationist Japanese cultural pressures its challenge to Japanese ethnic attitudes and ethnonational identity remains inherently contradictory Strangers in the Ethnic Homeland illuminates how cultural encounters caused by transnational migration can reinforce local ethnic identities and nationalist discourses The Psychoanalytic Study of Society, V. 16 L. Uprooting and Surviving Roberta Nannucci, 2012-12-06 The publication of this volume is significant in three respects First it represents a major concern of the international mental health movement in its effort to gain deeper understanding of migration and its mental health implications in our increasingly mobile modern societies Second it epitomizes continuous international cooperation of colleagues dedicated to the cause of tackling this important mental health problem Third it stands as another milestone in the growth of the World Federation for Mental Health through its biennial world congresses I sincerely hope that the empirical observations of real life events contained in this volume will stimulate others to add their own experiences and perspectives on these topics at future congresses It is also hoped that certain models of problem solving reported by the collaborators of this book may find wider application and that the results will be communicated to others It is through such ensuing developments that the World Federation for Mental Health wishes to and can fulfill its roles of advocacy and international communication in promoting international mental health My gratitude goes to Richard Nann and his colleagues for having made this timely contribution available

Psychocultural Research with the Thematic Apperception Test George A. De Vos, 2004

Africa in America Michael Mullin, 1992 In an attempt to lay bare the historical and cultural roots of modern African American societies in the South and the British West Indies Michael Mullin gives a vivid depiction of slave family life economic strategies and religion and their relationship to patterns of resistance and acculturation in two major plantation regions the Caribbean and the American South Generalized observations of plantation slavery usually assumed to be the whole of Africans experience fail to provide definitive answers about how they met and often overcame the challenges and deprivations of their new lives Mullin discusses three phases of slave resistance and religion in Anglo America both on and off plantations During the first or African phase from the 1730s to the 1760s slave resistance was generally sudden violently destructive and charged with African ritual The second phase from the late 1760s to the early 1800s involved plantation slaves who were more conservative and wary The third phase from the late 1760s to the second quarter of the nineteenth century was led by assimilated blacks artisans and drivers who having developed skills both on and off the plantation led the large preemancipation rebellions Mullin's case studies of slaveowners and plantation overseers draw on personal diaries and other documents to reveal memorable men whose approaches to their jobs varied widely and were as much affected by interactions with slaves as by personal background the location of the plantation and the economic climate of the times Extensive archival and anecdotal sources inform this pioneering study of slavery as it was practiced in tidewater Virginia on the rice coast of the Carolinas and in Jamaica and Barbados Bringing his training in anthropology to bear on sources from Great Britain the Caribbean and the United States Mullin offers new and definitive information
