Blackford,2018-03-31 Ranging from the Hawaiian Archipelago to the Aleutian Islands from Silicon Valley to Guam Pathways to the Present is a thoroughly researched and concisely argued account of economic and environmental change in the postwar American Pacific Following a brief survey of the history of the Pacific the author takes the Hawaiian Islands as the center of American activities in the region and looks at interactions among native Hawaiian developmental military and environmental issues in the archipelago after World War II He then turns to land and water use problems that have intersected with more nebulous quality of life concerns to generate policy controversies in the Seattle region and the San Francisco Bay area especially Silicon Valley Economic expansion and environmentalism in Alaska are examined through the lens of changes occurring along the Aleutians From there the study considers Hiroshima after its destruction by the atomic bomb in 1945 looking at residents desire to combine urban planning concepts The author investigates the effort to remake Hiroshima as a high tech city in the 1990s an attempt inspired by the perceived success of Silicon Valley and postwar planning on Okinawa where American influences were particularly strong The final chapter takes into account issues raised on Guam regarding the growth of tourism and the use of the island for military purposes and links these to developments in the Philippines to the west and American Samoa to the south

Settler Garrison Jodi Kim,2022-04-07 In Settler Garrison Jodi Kim theorizes how the United States extends its sovereignty across Asia and the Pacific in the post World War II era through a militarist settler imperialism that is leveraged on debt as a manifold economic and cultural relation undergirded by asymmetries of power Kim demonstrates that despite being the largest debtor nation in the world the United States positions itself as an imperial creditor that imposes financial and affective indebtedness alongside a disciplinary payback temporality even as it evades repayment of its own debts This debt imperialism is violently reproduced in juridically ambiguous spaces Kim calls the settler garrison a colonial archipelago of distinct yet linked military camptowns bases POW camps and unincorporated territories situated across the Pacific from South Korea to Okinawa to Guam Kim reveals this process through an analysis of how a wide array of transpacific cultural productions creates antimilitarist and decolonial imaginaries that diagnose US militarist settler imperialism while envisioning alternatives to it

Relationality and Learning in Oceania Seu'ula Johansson-Fua, Rebecca Jesson, Rebecca Spratt, Eve Coxon, 2020-02-25 This multi authored volume draws on the collective experiences of a team of researcher practitioners from three Oceanic universities in an aid funded intervention program for enhancing literacy learning in Pacific Islands primary education schools The interventions explored here in Solomon Islands and Tonga were implemented via a four year collaboration which adopted a design based research approach to bringing about sustainable improvements in teacher and student learning and in the delivery and evaluation of educational aid This approach demanded that learning from the context of practice should be determining of both content and process that all involved in the interventions should see themselves as learners Essential to the trusting and respectful relationships required for this approach was the program s acknowledgement of relationality as central to indigenous Oceanic societies and of education as a relational activity

Relationality and Learning in Oceania Contextualizing Education for Development addresses debates current in both comparative education and international aid Argued strongly is that relational research practice approaches south south south north which center the importance of context and culture and the significance of indigenous epistemologies are required to strengthen education within the post colonial relational space of Oceania and to inform the various agencies and actors involved in education for development in Oceania and globally Maintained is that the development of education structures and processes within the contexts explored through the chapters comprising this volume continues to be a negotiation between the complexity of historically developed local traditions and understandings and the global imperatives shaped by dominant development discourses
