challenges but can bring significant benefits in terms of efficiencies and also in recognising the links between hazards such as cascading threats. Enhancing Food Production System Resilience for Food Security Facing a Changing Environment Liming Ye, Ping Zhu, 2023-11-28. As the dominant source of the human food supply the global land system underlies the foundation of the livelihood and wellbeing of humanity on Earth. On the one hand the growth rate in the land system's productive capacity of food has played a key role in global food provision. Technological breakthroughs in wheat and rice production during the past few decades for instance have greatly contributed to the maintenance of this growth rate in many parts of the world. On the other hand however the terrestrial food production system is facing increasing challenges from environmental stressors ranging from climate change air pollution to land degradation. Whether and how the global land system will support the food security of more than 10 billion people in the 21st century while minimizing its environmental footprint remains an open question to debate. It is inevitable that the global food production system has to be shifted from focusing on production expansion to land system resilience so that the dual goals of sustainable production and environmental friendliness can be simultaneously achieved.

Maritime Security between China and Southeast Asia Liselotte Odgaard, 2017-03-02. Arguing that security relations between China and Southeast Asia are profoundly affected by disputes over maritime space and territory in the South China Sea the author demonstrates that the primacy of strategic competition over strategic partnerships promotes the emergence of a structure of deterrence encouraging South East Asia to side with the United States to balance the military power of China. Combining the concepts of international disputes and order the book establishes a framework designed to focus on periods of transition where international regulatory mechanisms are out of step with developments in the security environments of states. Features include Substantial evidence that strategic competition between the United States China and South East Asia promotes stability. A comprehensive account of military diplomatic economic historical and legal aspects of security environments of states. Suitable for scholars and graduate students of international relations international law security studies conflict management and regionalism it will also be invaluable supplementary reading for undergraduate courses.
