

The background of the entire image is a complex geometric pattern of overlapping triangles and polygons in various shades of orange, peach, and light pink. Superimposed on this pattern are several faint, semi-transparent portraits of human faces. These faces are also composed of the same geometric shapes, creating a mosaic effect. The faces appear to be of different ages and expressions, some looking directly at the viewer, others slightly averted. The overall aesthetic is modern and artistic, with a focus on color and form.

The Cinema and Its Shadow Alice Maurice, 2013-03-15 The Cinema and Its Shadow argues that race has defined the cinematic apparatus since the earliest motion pictures especially at times of technological transition In particular this work explores how racial difference became central to the resolving of cinematic problems the stationary camera narrative form realism the synchronization of image and sound and perhaps most fundamentally the immaterial image the cinema's shadow which figures both the material reality of the screen image and its racist past Discussing early race subjects Alice Maurice demonstrates that these films influenced cinematic narrative in lasting ways by helping to determine the relation between stillness and motion spectacle and narrative drive The book examines how motion picture technology related to race embodiment and authenticity at specific junctures in cinema's development including the advent of narratives feature films and sound In close readings of such films as The Cheat Shadows and Hallelujah Maurice reveals how the rhetoric of race repeatedly embodies film technology endowing it with a powerful mix of authenticity and magic In this way the racialized subject became the perfect medium for showing off shoring up and reintroducing the cinematic apparatus at various points in the history of American film Moving beyond analyzing race in purely thematic or ideological terms Maurice traces how it shaped the formal and technological means of the cinema
