

Healthy food swaps for a lower GI diet

The glycaemic index (GI) tells us how quickly a food raises blood glucose (sugar) levels into your blood stream after eating. The GI consists of a scale that runs from 0 to 100. The lower a food's GI, the slower glucose is released and the less it affects your blood sugar and insulin levels.

For this reason a low GI diet is particularly good if you have type 2 or gestational diabetes.

NB: Not all low GI foods are healthy choices. For example, most chocolates have a low-GI because of their fat content, which slows down the rate at which carbohydrates are absorbed. So, it's best to choose foods that are low in saturated fat, salt and sugar, and high in fibre and wholegrains.
