

SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS TO DETECT CHILDHOOD CANCER

Some visible signs on the body are:

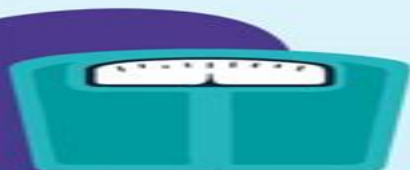

- Bruises or bruises that appear without explanation.
- Increase in the size of the abdomen or any strangely shaped part of the body.
- Repetitive bleeding from the nose or gums.
- White spots on the pupil or strabismus, that is, "crossed eyes".

- Lumps or swellings in the body, especially in the neck, groin, testicles, or armpits.
- Paleness or spots that appear on the skin without explanation.

Symptoms to watch out for:

- Sudden weight loss.
- Repetitive fevers and sweats without obvious explanation.

- The girl or boy reports feeling dizzy, body aches, headaches, or bone pain (back, knees...).
- Vomiting or recurrent diarrhea.

Some changes that may occur in mood:

- Loss of interest in routine activities due to fatigue, discouragement or unusual sleepiness.

It is essential to talk with boys and girls about the importance of knowing their own body and expressing the changes they notice in it. Open communication and a trusting relationship make it easier for warning signs and symptoms to be detected.

When cancer is detected at an early stage, it is more likely to respond to effective treatment, which increases the chance of survival, decreases suffering and often requires cheaper and less intensive treatment"

Childhood is a collection of forty chapters which are divided into three separate volumes. The overall purpose of this series is to answer the question: How do we as educators, clinicians, other professionals, and parents help children and adolescents deal with threat to their lives, dying, death, and bereavement? In this three-volume set, the editors have brought together a number of well-known educators, researchers, and practitioners who share their knowledge and expertise concerning the care and well-being of children and adolescents.

SPECIFIC TO VOLUME 1: Children explore the world around them through spontaneous and later structured learning, acquire knowledge, learn to understand themselves, establish their role in the family, develop peer and adult relationships, and find their place in the world. However, today's society does not include death as part of this developmental process. Unfortunately, such avoidance may negatively influence children's ability to acquire an understanding of the concepts of death and to develop positive attitudes toward death. Highlights of this section include: Answering children's questions; Children and death: past, present, and future; Gender differences; Teachable moments; Perceptions of death; cognitive development and children's artwork. The second part of volume 1 examines influences in today's society that potentially impact on children and adolescents' perceptions and attitudes toward life-threatening illness and death. This volume offers readers valuable insights into the various factors which ultimately affect children's ability to achieve a mature understanding of death. Features include the following: Violent death in a popular culture and the media; Political conflict and war; The epidemic of AIDS; Cultural differences in the management of life-threatening illness; Death rituals and funeral ceremonies.
