Psychological Counseling Research Focus James A. Patterson, Irina N. Lipschitz, 2008 Counselling psychology as a psychological speciality facilitates personal and interpersonal functioning across the life span with a focus on emotional social vocational educational health related developmental and organisational concerns Through the integration of theory research and practice and with a sensitivity to multicultural issues this speciality encompasses a broad range of practices that help people improve their well being alleviate distress and maladjustment resolve crises and increase their ability to live more highly functioning lives Though closely related to clinical psychology counselling psychology differs from that field in several subtle ways First counselling psychologists typically focus on less severe psychopathology e g depression and anxiety while clinical psychologists deal with more seriously disturbed individuals e g those with schizophrenia or personality disorders Second counselling psychologists are more likely than clinical psychologists to assume a client centred or humanistic theoretical approach Finally counselling psychology is unique in its attention both to normal developmental issues as well as the problems associated with physical emotional and mental disorders Despite these differences counselling and clinical psychology are becoming increasingly indistinguishable leading some to suggest that these fields be combined Populations served by counselling psychologists include persons of all ages and cultural backgrounds Examples of those populations would include late adolescents or adults with career educational concerns and children or adults facing severe personal difficulties Counselling psychologists also consult with organisations seeking to enhance their effectiveness or the well being of their members This book focuses on new research in the field from around the world

Ethical Issues in Art Therapy (4th Edition) Bruce L. Moon, Emily Goldstein Nolan, 2019-10-09. The real world of professional ethics in art therapy is more times than not a spectrum of shades of gray. In this exceptional new fourth edition, the authors raise questions and provide information related to the many ethical dilemmas art therapists face. Several chapters refer to the Ethical Principles for Art Therapists and Code of Professional Practice of the Art Therapy Credentials Board. Changes that were made to the AATA Ethics Document in 2013 are discussed. Models of how to think through and resolve the difficult ethical problems art therapists encounter during their professional lives are presented. A chapter discussing burnout and compassion fatigue costs of caring provides an understanding of the responsibility that systems hold in supporting therapists and clients. Within each chapter, there are dilemma-laden vignettes intended to stimulate reflection and discussion. Most chapters include a series of questions pertaining to practical applications aimed at helping to review the material, formulate and clarify positions on key issues. Also included are suggested artistic tasks intended to help the reader engage with topics in meta-cognitive, kinetic, visual and sensory methods. Compelling illustrations throughout the text are provided as examples of creative responses to the artistic tasks. In addition, informational topics dealing with ethical violations, rights of artworks, marketing, advertising and publicity are explored. The importance of multicultural approaches is expanded with the discussion that competence is a baseline for practice as an art therapist. Significant updates were made to the chapter that explores art therapy in the digital age. The appendices contain ethics documents of the British Association of Art Therapists for comparison. This unique book is designed for art therapy students, art therapists, expressive arts therapy professionals and will be a useful and supplemental textbook for art therapy courses dealing with professional ethics and supervision, art therapy theory and practice.
