Methods on Perceptions of People with Physical Disabilities in the Workplace Holly Carolyn Baxter, 2003 While many physical barriers have been removed since the Americans with Disabilities Act was signed into law in 1990 many attitudinal and communication barriers remain intact more than a decade later This study examines several strategies for diminishing these barriers with the goal of more fully integrating people with disabilities into the workplace The study begins by addressing the importance of changing attitudes toward people with disabilities in the workplace It goes on to explore some of the communication methods that based on past research appear to accomplish this goal Of particular interest is how varying communication strategies impact attitudes behaviors training effectiveness and motivation to learn The study also explores the possible relationship between attitudes and behavior and the extent to which and the ways in which this relationship impacts incorporating those with disabilities into the workplace In addition this investigation delineates some key elements of an effective diversity training program aimed at incorporating people with disabilities into an organization Finally it concludes by examining the usefulness of mass mediated communication as a motivating factor that might encourage viewers to learn the material taught in diversity training programs The results suggest that both interpersonal and mediated communication function as key assets in an effective training program and mass mediated communication in particular is an effective tool in motivating individuals to learn Until we are able to break down attitudinal and communication barriers people with disabilities will not be able to be fully integrated and seen as assets in the ever changing work force Only when these problems are addressed will the full intent of the Americans with Disabilities Act be realized
