

A woman with dark hair tied back in a bun is sitting cross-legged on the ground. She is wearing a red long-sleeved top and a light-colored, flowing skirt. She is looking upwards and to her right. In front of her is a woven basket filled with red and green chili peppers. Several more chili peppers are scattered on the ground in front of her. The background is a soft, blended gradient from purple at the top to orange at the bottom.

Women and Power in Native North America

Laura F. Klein,Lillian A. Ackerman,1995 Power is understood to be manifested in a multiplicity of ways through cosmology economic control and formal hierarchy In the Native societies examined power is continually created and redefined through individual life stages and through the history of the society The important issue is autonomy whether or to what extent individuals are autonomous in living their lives Each author demonstrates that women in a particular cultural area of aboriginal North America had and have more power than many previous observers have claimed

R.R. Bowker Company,1985 Indigenous Aesthetics Steven Leuthold,2010-07-05 What happens when a

Native or indigenous person turns a video camera on his or her own culture Are the resulting images different from what a Westernized filmmaker would create and if so in what ways How does the use of a non Native art making medium specifically video or film affect the aesthetics of the Native culture These are some of the questions that underlie this rich study of Native American aesthetics art media and identity Steven Leuthold opens with a theoretically informed discussion of the core concepts of aesthetics and indigenous culture and then turns to detailed examination of the work of American Indian documentary filmmakers including George Burdeau and Victor Masayesva Jr He shows how Native filmmaking incorporates traditional concepts such as the connection to place to the sacred and to the cycles of nature While these concepts now find expression through Westernized media they also maintain continuity with earlier aesthetic productions In this way Native filmmaking serves to create and preserve a sense of identity for indigenous people Nuestras Mujeres Tey Diana
