Governing Future Technologies Mario Kaiser, Monika Kurath, Sabine Maasen, Christoph Rehmann-Sutter, 2009-10-29

Nanotechnology has been the subject of extensive assessment hype unlike any previous field of research and development A multiplicity of stakeholders have started to analyze the implications of nanotechnology Technology assessment institutions around the world non governmental organizations think tanks re insurance companies and academics from science and technology studies and applied ethics have turned their attention to this growing field s implications In the course of these assessment efforts a social phenomenon has emerged a phenomenon the editors define as assessment regime Despite the variety of organizations methods and actors involved in the evaluation and regulation of emerging nanotechnologies the assessment activities comply with an overarching scientific and political imperative Innovations are only welcome if they are assessed against the criteria of safety sustainability desirability and acceptability So far such deliberations and reflections have played only a subordinate role This book argues that with the rise of the nanotechnology assessment regime however things have changed dramatically Situated at the crossroads of democratizing science and technology good governance and the quest for sustainable innovations the assessment regime has become constitutive for technological development The contributions in this book explore and critically analyse nanotechnology s assessment regime To what extent is it constitutive for technology in general for nanotechnology in particular What social conditions render the regime a phenomenon sui generis And what are its implications for science and society
