Race Ethnicity And Difference Imagining The Inclusive Society:

Race Ethnicity and Difference: Imagining the Inclusive Society Peter Ratcliffe, 2004-06-16 This excellent book provides an extremely readable account which deserves to be widely read by a more general audience. In short, the author, in making sense of current imaginings, presents a mix of theoretical and empirical debates as he challenges exclusionary forces. The book's principal aim is to take a critical look at the nature and sources of inequalities in contemporary societies and examine the prospects for an inclusive society. This aim captures an important strength of the text as the analysis attempts to move beyond simple description and provide explanations and possible solutions to enable policy and practice to tackle disadvantage and discrimination. Social Policy This book addresses many of the key problems facing contemporary societies. The social significance attached to various forms of difference, most notably race and ethnicity, has been seen as resulting in the exclusion of some groups from their full rights as citizens. This in turn is viewed as presenting a series of barriers to the creation of more inclusive societies. Peter Ratcliffe explores these arguments in a variety of substantive contexts, for example immigration and the treatment of refugees and asylum seekers, housing and segregation, education, labour markets, and policing and urban conflict. Particular emphasis is placed on the role of social agency on the part of minorities in confronting exclusionary forces. This lively and highly readable account deals with difficult theoretical, ethical, and policy issues without resort to unnecessary jargon. It is essential reading for undergraduate students in sociology, social policy, urban geography, law, and political science, and is also of value to the general reader and researcher.

EBOOK: Race And Ethnicity In A Welfare Society Charlotte Williams, Mark Johnson, 2010-10-16 The book aims to review debates, issues, and concepts associated with the notion of a multicultural welfare state in the context of contemporary Britain. Drawing on examples from across need groups—children, mental health, older people, women, etc.—it explores the ways in which black and ethnic minorities engage in the production of welfare. It considers major transformations in the delivery and practices of welfare, their implications for the engagement, access, and participation of ethnic minorities. It considers issues of race and ethnicity within the context of a variety of welfare policy arenas and suggests ways that welfare practices could be transformed to incorporate ideas such as cosmopolitan citizenship within a welfare society. The book will appeal to undergraduate and postgraduate students of social work, social policy, and sociology taking modules in Race and Ethnicity, Social Care and Welfare, Community Studies, Social Exclusion and Citizenship. It will also appeal to practitioners with an interest in welfare policy and practice generally and those with a specific interest in welfare delivery issues and racial and ethnic diversity.

Transgressing Boundaries. Elizabeth F. Oldfield, 2013 Fictions written between 1939 and 2005 by indigenous and white post colonial women writers emerging from an African European cultural experience form the focus of this study Their voyages into the European diasporic space in Africa are important for conveying how African women's literature is situated in relation to colonialism Notwithstanding the centrality of African literature in the new postcolonial literatures in English the accomplishments of the indigenous writer Grace Ogot have been eclipsed by the critical attention given to her male counterparts while Elspeth Huxley Barbara Kimenye and Marjorie Oludhe Macgoye who are of Western cultural provenance but adopt an African perspective are not accommodated by the genre of expatriate literature The present study of both indigenous and white post colonial women's narratives that are common to both categories fills this gap Focused on the representation of gender identity culture and the Other the texts selected are set in Kenya and Uganda and a main concern is with the extent to which they are influenced by setting and intercultural influences The African woman's creation of textuality is at once the expression of female individualities and a transgression of boundaries The particular category of fiction for children as written by Kimenye and Macgoye reveals the configuration of a voice and identity for the female Other and writer which enables a subversive renegotiation of identity in the face of patriarchal traditions
