Appalachia ,1981 Greater London Nick Barratt,2012-11-15 London s suburbs may stretch for well over 600 square miles but in historical accounts of the capital they tend to take something of a back seat In Greater London historian Nick Barratt places them firmly centre stage tracing their journey from hamlets and villages far out in the open countryside to fully fledged urban enclaves simultaneously demonstrating the crucial role they have played in the creation of today s metropolis Starting in the first century AD he shows how the tiny settlements that grew up in the Thames Valley gradually developed and how they were shaped by their proximity to the city He describes the spread of the first suburbs beyond the city walls and traces the ebb and flow of population as people moved in to find jobs or away to escape London s noise and bustle He charts the transformation wrought by the coming of the railways the fight to preserve Hampstead Heath Epping Forest and other green spaces and the struggle to create a London wide form of government He gives an account of wartime destruction and peacetime reconstruction and then brings the story to the present with a description of the very varied nature of today s suburbs and their inhabitants In the process he evokes Tudor Hackney and Georgian Hampton explains why Victorian Battersea and Finchley were so different from one another and follows Islington's fall from grace and subsequent recovery. Magnificently illustrated throughout with contemporary engravings and photographs, this is the essential history for anyone who has ever lived in London.

Historical Geographies of Prisons Karen Morin, Dominique Moran, 2015-06-12 This is the first book to provide a comprehensive historical geographical lens to the development and evolution of correctional institutions as a specific subset of carceral geographies. This book analyzes and critiques global practices of incarceration, regimes of punishment, and their corresponding spaces of corrections from the eighteenth to twenty-first centuries. It examines individuals' experiences within various regulatory regimes and spaces of punishment and offers an interpretation of spaces of incarceration as cultural historical artifacts. The book also analyzes the spatial distributional geographies of incarceration, particularly with respect to their historical impact on community, political, economic development, and local geographies. Contributions within this book examine a range of prison sites and the practices that take place within them to help us understand how regimes of punishment are experienced and are constructed in different kinds of ways across space and time for very different ends. The overall aim of this book is to help understand the legacies of carceral geographies in the present. The resonances across space and time tell a profound story of social and spatial legacies and as such offer important insights into the prison crisis we see in many parts of the world today.

Braman reveals the devastating toll mass incarceration takes on the parents, partners, and children left behind. Katherine S. Newman. Doing Time on the Outside brings to life in a compelling way the human drama and tragedy of our incarceration policies. Donald Braman documents the profound economic and social consequences of the American policy of massive imprisonment of young African American males. He shows us the link between the broad scale policy changes of recent decades and the isolation and stigma that these bring to family members who have a loved one in prison If we want to understand fully the impact of current criminal justice policies this book should be required reading Mark Mauer Assistant Director The Sentencing Project Through compelling stories and thoughtful analysis this book describes how our nation s punishment policies have caused incalculable damage to the fabric of family and community life Anyone concerned about the future of urban America should read this book Jeremy Travis The Urban Institute In the tradition of Elijah Anderson s Code of the Street and Katherine Newman s No Shame in My Game this startling new ethnography by Donald Braman uncovers the other side of the incarceration saga the little told story of the effects of imprisonment on the prisoners families Since 1970 the incarceration rate in the United States has more than tripled and in many cities urban centers such as Washington D C it has increased over five fold Today one out of every ten adult black men in the District is in prison and three out of every four can expect to spend some time behind bars But the numbers don t reveal what it s like for the children wives and parents of prisoners or the subtle and not so subtle effects mass incarceration is having on life in the inner city Author Donald Braman shows that those doing time on the inside are having a ripple effect on the outside reaching deep into the family and community life of urban America Braman gives us the personal stories of what happens to the families and communities that prisoners are taken from and return to Carefully documenting the effects of incarceration on the material and emotional lives of families this groundbreaking ethnography reveals how criminal justice policies are furthering rather than abating the problem of social disorder Braman also delivers a number of genuinely new arguments Among these is the compelling assertion that incarceration is holding offenders unaccountable to victims communities and families The author gives the first detailed account of incarceration s corrosive effect on social capital in the inner city and describes in poignant detail how the stigma of prison pits family and community members against one another Drawing on a series of powerful family portraits supported by extensive empirical data Braman shines a light on the darker side of a system that is failing the very families and communities it seeks to protect
