

Self-Studyship

- Self-study is not limited to teachers.
- Although self-study research grew out of the work of teacher educators, it has expanded to include practitioners such as administrators, librarians, occupational therapists, psychotherapists, counselors, and community educators working for social justice and educational reform.
- This extension of self-study of teachers to other practitioners is known as self-studyship (Samaras & Freese, 2006).
