Low-latency and Robust Peer-to-peer Video Streaming JeongHun Noh, 2010 Peer to peer P2P systems have emerged as a promising and cost effective transport solution for streaming video to a group of users in the Internet In the P2P architecture users not only consume video but also forward it to other users Thus P2P systems scale better than client server systems as users bring resources to the system The challenge is to achieve low latency and robust video dissemination by overcoming a number of adversarial aspects and challenges peer dynamics heterogeneous uplink bandwidth of peers heterogeneous hardware and capabilities of peers and peer wise connection restrictions due to NATs firewalls This dissertation presents Stanford Peer to Peer Multicast SPPM a P2P video streaming system SPPM is designed to achieve low latency and robust streaming by constructing an overlay of multiple complementary trees and dynamically rearranging the position of peers by Active Overlay Management in a distributed fashion Next we extend SPPM for providing playback control to users by time shifted streaming To perform time shifted streaming peers store past portions of video and forward them to other users when requested thereby reducing server load To further alleviate server load we propose fast prefetching by which peers can disseminate content quickly Finally we present a way to accommodate mobile users Video transcoding is often required to adapt video for the mobile users We propose interleaved distributed transcoding IDT which allows a video stream to be transcoded at multiple peers that are more capable than mobile users IDT is shown not only to reduce computation required at a peer but also to achieve higher error resilience in case of peer failure or packet loss

Culture: Raise 'low', Rethink 'high.' A Representation of the Academic Potential of So-Called 'Low' Culture Emma Buchanan, 2020-11-15 Despite or more likely due to being the culture which most affects and interacts with the masses the broad and definition evading category of popular culture remains a second class citizen in academia relegated to a position of low below a culture deemed high and worthy of scholarly inquiry This eclectic collection of essays aims to convince that this inequality must be addressed by exploring a variety of supposedly low cultural types and texts through an academic lens proving that so called low culture can be a valuable contribution to academic research That said raising the low does not mean making it high turning it into an elite category to be accessed only by experts Rather the authors are unswerving in their approach that academic writing and fan writing are not mutually exclusive On the contrary it is their knowledge and passion as fans of their subject matter that has inspired their chapters all of which draw upon their considerable experience of engaging as fans in what they discuss All the chapters have been written by postgraduate students seeking to inspire a new empiricism through which their interests might be fully pursued in their futures as scholars Emma Buchanan is a British postgraduate researcher and television fan who is currently writing up her PhD thesis on the topic of gender and change in AMC's The Walking Dead as understood from the point of view of Jungian depth psychology
