Tarikhu Farrar,2020-01-20 The idea of an inherent backwardness of technology and material culture in early sub Saharan Africa is a persistent and tenacious myth in the scholarly and popular imagination Due to the emergence of the field of African studies and the upsurge in historical and archaeological research in recent decades the stridency of this myth has weakened and the overtly racist content of arguments mustered in its defense have tended to disappear But more important are transformations in social political and cultural consciousness which have worked to reshape conceptualizations of African peoples their histories and their cultures Precolonial African Material Culture offers a thorough challenge to the myth of technological backwardness V Tarikhu Farrar revisits the early technology of sub Saharan Africa as revealed by recent research and reconsiders long possessed primary historical sources He then explores the ways that indigenous African technologies have influenced the world beyond the African continent Plant World of the Bible Hans Arne Jensen,2012-08-03 The dream of paradise and the use of plants in story telling are as old as man The Bible readers need only turn a few pages before meeting a description of paradise and a whole world of known and unknown plants such as aloe barley bdellium cedar fig frankincense pomegranate olive vine and general terms like the lily of the fields Not only Bible readers but everyone interested in botany archaeology or vegetation history can find subjects of interest in the book for references are made both to the rich use of plants in the Bible as well as to use of plants in the surrounding coeval cultures PLANT WORLD OF THE BIBLE includes a comprehensive list of biblical plants found in archaeological excavations in Israel and surrounding countries For the first time it is now possible for most of the biblical plants to refer to archaeological finds dated to the biblical period I find that Dr Jensens work is not only accurate but it is also very interesting This work should be accepted and enjoyed world wide Dr Arnold L Larsen Director and Professor emeritus Colorado State University Ft Collins Colorado among crop plants. Several constraints such as long life cycle have caused comparatively slow research progress in the past.
