Butler,Claude Jasmin,2012-12-06 Nations around the world are experiencing a spectacular increase in longevity Society as a whole is being challenged by issues arising from this revolution in longevity Although the specter of the loneliness and existential suffering of older citizens is such that some people under the age of 65

find it difficult to conceive of a long term future persons over 85 have proven that aging does not necessarily preclude a healthy and productive life Extraordinary progress in both curative and preventive medicine justifies optimism about the quality of life and state of well being that can be enjoyed even in great old age We should look to professionals in diverse fields to develop creative solutions to the inevitable issues that will arise with aging Governments must prepare for the future health of their citizens by making long term investments to educate all sectors of society in the value of good nutrition exercise and lifestyles that enhance well being throughout life Also governments should realize that the main cause of health care expenditure is serious illness which occurs in persons of all ages and not predominantly in older people Early detection can help save lives as well Health and longevity of life will ultimately end as a political issue What is needed is long term government investments necessary for a viable health policy The question arises will world leaders be able to commit to such a policy Two major socioeconomic phenomena may have a regulating effect on this issue The first is the emergence of pressure groups that have come into being in response to a particular health issue such as AIDS The second is the emergence of ethics committees in developed nations that deal solely with health issues

P. Wong,Claude-Hélène Mayer,Gökmen Arslan, In the era of COVID 19 many people have suffered high levels of stress and mental health problems To cope with the widespread of suffering physical psychological social and economical the positive psychology of personal happiness is no longer the sole approach to examine personal wellbeing Other approaches such as Viktor Frankl's theory of self transcendence provides a promising framework for research and intervention on how to achieve resilience, wellbeing, and happiness through overcoming suffering and self transcendence. The existential positive psychology of suffering complements the positive psychology of happiness, which is championed by Martin Seligman, as two equal halves of the circle of wellbeing and optimal mental health. This Research Topic aims to examine the different approaches to Positive Psychology and their influence on individual wellbeing during the COVID-19 era. One of the exciting developments in the positive psychology of wellbeing is the mounting research on the adaptive benefits of negative emotions such as shame, guilt, and anger, as well as the dialectical process of balancing negative and positive emotions. As an example based on all the empirical research and Frankl's self transcendence model, Wong has developed the existential positive psychology of suffering as the foundation for flourishing. Here are a few main tenets of PP2.0: 1. Life is suffering and a constant struggle throughout every stage of development. 2. The search for self transcendence is a primary motive guided by the meaning mindset and mindful mindset. 3. Wellbeing cannot be sustainable without overcoming and transforming suffering. In this Research Topic, we welcome diverse approaches discussing the following points: The dialectic process of overcoming the challenges of every stage of development as necessary for personal growth and self transcendence; The role of self transcendence in resilience, virtue, meaning, and happiness; The upside of negative emotions; The new science of resilience based on cultivating the resilient mindset and character; How to make the best use of suffering to achieve our potentials; mental health.
