Citizenship and Immigration in Postwar Britain Randall Hansen, 2000-06-01 In this contentious and ground breaking study the author draws on extensive archival research to provide a new account of the transformation of the United Kingdom into a multicultural society through an analysis of the evolution of immigration and citizenship policy since 1945 Against the prevailing academic orthodoxy he argues that British immigration policy was not racist but both rational and liberal In this ground breaking book the author draws extensively on archival material and theoretical advances in the social science literature Citizenship and Immigration in Post war Britain examines the transformation since 1945 of the UK from a homogeneous into a multicultural society Rejecting a dominant strain of sociological and historical inquiry emphasizing state racism Hansen argues that politicians and civil servants were overall liberal relative to the public to which they owed their office and that they pursued policies that were rational for any liberal democratic politician He explains the trajectory of British migration and nationality policy its exceptional liberality in the 1950s its restrictiveness after then and its tortured and seemingly racist definition of citizenship The combined effect of a 1948 imperial definition of citizenship adopted independently of immigration and a primary commitment to migration from the Old Dominions locked British politicians into a series of policy choices resulting in a migration and nationality regime that was not racist in intention but was racist in effect In the context of a liberal elite and an illiberal public Britain's current restrictive migration policies result not from the failing of its policy makers but from those of its institutions

Understanding Post-War British Society Peter Catterall, James Obelkevich, 2002-11 Brings together the perspectives of leading sociologists and social historians to understand the shaping of British society An illuminating and comprehensive account of post war British History German Migrants in Post-War Britain Dr Inge Weber-Newth, Johannes-Dieter Steinert, 2006-03-29 Both timely and topical with 2005 marking the 60th anniversary of the end of the Second World War this unique book examines the little known and under researched area of German migration to Britain in the immediate post war era Authors Weber Newth and Steinert analyze the political framework of post war immigration and immigrant policy and the complex decision making processes that led to large scale labour migration from the continent They consider identity perception of self and others stereotypes and prejudice how migrants dealt with language and intercultural issues migrants attitudes towards national socialist and contemporary Germany migrants motivation for leaving Germany migrants initial experiences and their reception in Britain after the war as recalled after 50 years in the host country compared to their original expectations Based on rich British and German governmental and non governmental archive sources contemporary newspaper articles and nearly eighty biographically oriented interviews with German migrants this outstanding volume a must read for students and scholars in the fields of social history sociology and migration studies expertly encompasses political as well as social historical questions and engages with the social economic and cultural situation of German immigrants to Britain from a life historical perspective

The Spectre of Defeat in Post-War British and US Literature David Owen, Cristina Pividori, 2021-01-22 It is a commonplace belief that history is written by the victorious However less recognised but equally common is the idea that the defeated also write history even if their particular account is rather different This collection looks at these matters from a novel and distinct perspective It essentially presents the idea that victors often perceive themselves as defeated by examining the ways in which the idea of defeat comes to dominate the victors own sense of superiority and achievement thereby undermining the certainties that victory is conventionally thought to create The contributions here discuss fiction mostly UK and US published since the First World War Through the frameworks of experience memory and post memory they examine this subliminal defeat basically as seen in conflict itself in the societies that it affects and in the individual lives of those who it destroys The result is an innovative literary account of the victorious yet somehow defeated
