Pulling Together Economic Council of Canada,1982 How Ottawa Spends, 1992-93 Frances Abele,1992 How Ottawa Spends, 1992-1993 Frances Abele,1992-05-15 This volume is the thirteenth in the series on federal government spending and policy performance compiled by Carleton University's School of Public Administration This year's edition considers the politics of competitiveness the ways in which international forces and trends pose particular challenges to federal policy makers Articles are provided by experts on a variety of topics including staff relations under the Tories federal attempts to grapple with unemployment and the changing global economy the evolving relationship between the Department of Finance and the Bank of Canada changes in the funding of health care the governance of the national capital as well as federal attention to policies for the disabled and the Canadian AIDS policy Also addressed are the Conservatives centerpiece environmental program the Green Plan and regulation to broadcasting in the face of major technological advances How Ottawa Spends, 1993-1994 Susan D. Phillips,1993-05-15 Canada and the Global Economy John N. H. Britton,1996 An analysis of geographic trends in the Canadian economy studying patterns of development consumption shifts in employment and the locational behavior of industries The 24 essays written by Canadian economic geographers explore themes in regards to the openness of the Canadian economy its simple economic geography in regional variation of resources and urban development its rapid advances in technology and the role of government in national and international markets Canadian card order number C96 900023 5 Annotation copyright by Book News Inc Portland OR Asleep at the Switch Bruce Smardon,2014-11-01 Since 1960 Canadian industry has lagged behind other advanced capitalist economies in its level of commitment to research and development Asleep at the Switch explains the reasons for this underperformance despite a series of federal measures to spur technological innovation in Canada Bruce Smardon argues that the underlying issue in Canada's longstanding failure to innovate is structural and can be traced to the rapid diffusion of American Fordist practices into the manufacturing sector of the early twentieth century Under the influence of Fordism Canadian industry came to depend heavily on outside sources of new technology particularly from the United States Though this initially brought in substantial foreign capital and led to rapid economic development the resulting branch plant industrial structure led to the prioritization of business interests over transformative and innovative industrial strategies This situation was exacerbated in the early 1960s by the Glassco framework which assumed that the best way for the federal state to foster domestic technological capacity was to fund private sector research and collaborative strategies with private capital Remarkably and with few results federal programs and measures continued to emphasize a market oriented approach Asleep at the Switch details the ongoing attempts by the federal government to increase the level of innovation in Canadian industry but shows why these efforts have failed to alter the pattern of technological dependency The Political Economy of North American Free Trade Ricardo Grinspun,Maxwell A. Cameron,1993-06-18 Analyzes the economic social political and environmental implications of NAFTA from a range of critical perspectives The chapters unified by a sceptical view of the management of economic integration in North America cover the economic strategy of Mexico Canada US trade agreement and more

Degrees of Freedom Keith G. Banting, George Hoberg, 1997-02-19 The book's primary aim is to determine whether Canada and the United States have become more similar as their economies have become more integrated and their societies more diverse The authors conclude that although powerful economic and social pressures clearly constrain national governments and lead to convergence in some areas distinctive cultural and political processes preserve room for distinctive national responses to important problems of the late twentieth century Authors include Keith Banting Paul Boothe University of Alberta Marsha Chandler University of Toronto George Hoberg Robert Howse University of Toronto Christopher Manfredi McGill University George Perlin Queen's University Douglas Purvis Queen's University Richard Simeon and Elaine Willis consultant Toronto
