Selected Books for Children with Emphasis on Black History and Culture Illinois Commission on Human Relations. Education Services Department, 1970

Second-Generation Memory and Contemporary Children's Literature Anastasia Ulanowicz, 2013-09-02 Winner of the Children's Literature Association Book Award This book visits a range of textual forms including diary novel and picturebook to explore the relationship between second generation memory and contemporary children's literature Ulanowicz argues that second generation memory informed by intimate family relationships textual mediation and technology is characterized by vicarious rather than direct experience of the past As such children's literature is particularly well suited to the representation of second generation memory insofar as children's fiction is particularly invested in the transmission and reproduction of cultural memory and its form promotes the formation of various complex intergenerational relationships. Further, children's books that depict second generation memory have the potential to challenge conventional Western notions of selfhood and ethics. This study shows how novels such as Lois Lowry's The Giver 1993 and Judy Blume's Starring Sally J. Freedman as Herself 1977 both of which feature protagonists who adapt their elders' memories into their own mnemonic repertoires implicitly reject Cartesian notions of the unified subject in favor of a view of identity as always already social, relational and dynamic in character. This book not only questions how and why second generation memory is represented in books for young people but whether such representations of memory might be considered radical or conservative. Together these analyses address a topic that has not been explored fully within the fields of children's literature, trauma and memory studies and Holocaust studies.

Separating, Losing and Excluding Children Tom Billington, 2012-10-12 There has been an outpouring of children from schools over the last few years. The reasons for their exclusion from schools include learning difficulties, behavioural problems or physical disability. Other reasons that are not dependent on a deficit model of the children relate to Conservative led initiatives involving school league tables, greater accountability, inspections etc. Whatever the reasons, the new government are committed to reducing the number of children who are forced out of mainstream schooling. The author addresses the key issues and relates them to the main theory literature in the area. He unpicks the major theories and applies them to possible ways of working with children in the classroom. Four case studies are used in order to make these proposed ways of working more accessible. As with other books in the series, exercises, readings and questions are set throughout.
