Selected Memories Of A Defense Dilettante:

Selected Memories of a Defense Dilettante Marvin Stern, 2001-04-01 The Cold War together with its accompanying Arms Race existed for some forty five years Many of those working in science and technology had only known the applications of these skills within the framework of and applied to this arms race Experiences of World War II resulted in the concept of the strategic use of military force being considered to be synonymous with area bombing and the destruction of civilian populations The introduction of the Atomic Bomb at the end of the war with Japan merely emphasized this conclusion Finally some fifteen years after World War II the introduction of the capability for rapid delivery of nuclear weapons by means of indefensible long range highly accurate ballistic missiles made this concept very neat and complete The technological challenges introduced in the designing for the use of nuclear weapons and their delivery systems in the context of this arms race were indeed exciting All the best talents were applied and an almost inexhaustible supply of funds was made available It is within this environment that Marvin Stern spent most of his professional career Achieving a rank of second or third tier technologist in the Defense area it was intellectually most stimulating to meet and at times to work with some of the world s great scientists who had contributed to the initiation and development of the atomic bomb Stern was also fortunate to have been able to work with the leaders in the development of aircraft and missile delivery systems and with those responsible for the application of game theoretic approaches in analyses of operational uses of these weapon systems Marvin Stern while working as an aircraft engineer pursued graduate studies in mathematics Upon earning his doctorate in mathematics in June of 1954 he went to work at Convair in San Diego on the first U S ICBM the Atlas Within hours after his arrival at Convair he solved an unsolvable problem and earned early recognition He was then given the responsibility of managing a consulting group consisting of the top twenty scientists in the country This consulting group included men such as Theodore Von Karman Richard Courant Hans Bethe Eugene Wigner Edward Teller George Gamow John Wheeler and Fred Seitz together with political scientist Henry Kissinger and economist Oskar Morgenstern Due to the influences of these senior scientists he became helpful in creating the environment for production of scientific talent and for its application to Defense problems Upon hearing of Marvin Stern s accomplishment UCLA prevailed upon him to teach an evening course in graduate mathematics under the title UCLA Graduate Extension Program in San Diego This was then extended to include several other graduate courses and Stern became Chairman of the UCLA Graduate Extension Program in San Diego all this in addition to his full time job at Convair In the late 1950s he further extended this by assisting in the origination of the University of California at San Diego with initial emphasis on the training of scientists In addition at about that time Stern conceived of and initiated the Jasons a mechanism for exposing bright young university professors throughout the country to technical problems of Defense in order to stimulate them in areas for research Of the first 100 participants in Jason eight of them subsequently won Nobel prizes In August of 1960 Marvin Stern went to work in the Office of the Secretary of Defense as

Assistant Director of Defense Research and Engineering for Strategic Systems Soon after joining the Department of Defense he became aware of a series of accidents each of which could have resulted in the detonation of a nuclear weapon or in an inadvertent or unauthorized launch of a nuclear delivery system Aggressively pursuing this area he was able to introduce certain additional mechanisms for stability and control He convinced both the United States and the Soviet Union to sign the Man-made Catastrophes and Risk Information Concealment Dmitry Chernov, Didier Sornette, 2015-10-27 This book discusses the risks of information concealment in the context of major natural or industrial disasters offering detailed descriptions and analyses of some 25 historical cases Three Mile Island nuclear accident Bhopal disaster Challenger Space Shuttle explosion Chernobyl nuclear disaster Deepwater Horizon oil spill Fukushima Daiichi nuclear disaster Enron's bankruptcy Subprime mortgage crisis Worldwide Spanish flu and SARS outbreaks etc and applying these insights to selected ongoing cases where such information concealment is suspected Some successful examples of preventive anti concealment practice are also presented In the book the term concealment is used to represent the two distinct behaviors uncovered in the investigations i facts and information about an organization and its functioning being hidden from those that need them here the concealment can be due to various factors such as complexity and miscommunication to name but two and ii the conscious and deliberate action of keeping important information secret or misrepresenting it This second meaning makes up a surprisingly important part of the evidence presented Accordingly emphasis has been put on this second aspect and the approach is more pragmatic than academic remaining focused on evidence based practical and useful factors It raises awareness and provides valuable lessons for decision makers risk specialists and responsible citizens alike This work is also intended as a fact based reference work for future academic and scholarly investigations on the roots of the problem in particular regarding any psychological or sociological modeling of human fallibility The American Printer, 1920 American Printer and Bookmaker, 1920
