rise to 9 billion by the end of 2050 and 70% of more food must be produced over the next three decades to feed the additional population. The breeding approaches for crop improvement programs are dependent on the availability and accessibility of genetic variation either spontaneous or induced by the mutagens. Plant breeders, agronomists, and geneticists are under constant pressure to expand food production by employing innovative breeding strategies to enhance yield, adaptability, nutrition, resistance to biotic and abiotic stresses. In conventional breeding approaches, introgression of genes in crop varieties is laborious and time consuming. Nowadays, new innovative plant breeding techniques such as molecular breeding and plant biotechnology supplement the traditional breeding approaches to achieve the desired goals of enhanced food production. With the advent of recent molecular tools like genomics, transgenics, molecular marker-assisted backcrossing, TILLING, Eco TILLING, gene editing, CRISPR-CAS, non-targeted protein abundant comparative proteomics, genome-wide association studies, have made possible mapping of important QTLs, insertion of transgenes, reduction of linkage drags, and manipulation of genome. In general, conventional and modern plant breeding approaches would be strategically ideal for developing new elite crop varieties to meet the feeding requirement of the increasing world population. This book highlights the latest progress in the field of plant breeding and their applicability in crop improvement. The basic concept of this 2 volume work is to assess the use of modern breeding strategies in supplementing the conventional breeding toward the development of elite crop varieties for obtaining desired goals of food production.
