Job Loss, Identity, and Mental Health Dawn R. Norris, 2016-06-13 Our jobs are often a big part of our identities and when we are fired we can feel confused hurt and powerless at sea in terms of who we are Drawing on extensive real life interviews Job Loss Identity and Mental Health shines a light on the experiences of unemployed middle class professional men and women showing how job loss can affect both identity and mental health Sociologist Dawn R Norris uses in depth interviews to offer insight into the experience of losing a job what it means for daily life how the unemployed feel about it and the process they go through as they try to deal with job loss and their new identities as unemployed people Norris highlights several specific challenges to identity that can occur For instance the way other people interact with the unemployed either helps them feel sure about who they are or leads them to question their identities Another identity threat happens when the unemployed no longer feel they are the same person they used to be Norris also examines the importance of the subjective meaning people give to statuses along with the strong influence of society's expectations For example men in Norris's study often used the stereotype of the male breadwinner to define who they were Job Loss Identity and Mental Health describes various strategies to cope with identity loss including shifting away from a work related identity and instead emphasizing a nonwork identity such as a parent or conversely sustaining a work related identity even though he or she is actually unemployed Finally Norris explores the social factors often out of the control of unemployed people that make these strategies possible or impossible A compelling portrait of a little studied aspect of the Great Recession Job Loss Identity and Mental Health is filled with insight into the identity crises that unemployment can trigger as well as strategies to help the unemployed maintain their mental strength
