Main Street Ready-Made Arnold R. Alanen, Joseph A. Eden, 2014-05-28 The dream of the suburb is an old one in America For more than a century city dwellers have sought to escape the crowding and pollution of industrial centers for the quiet streets and green spaces on their fringes In the 1930s that dream inspired the largest migration of Americans in the twentieth century and led to the creation of Greendale Wisconsin one of three planned communities initially begun to resettle the rural poor hit hard by the Great Depression This idea though quickly developed into a plan to revitalize cities and stabilize farming communities around the nation The result was three greenbelt towns built from scratch expressly for working class families and within easy commuting distance of urban employment Greendale completed in 1938 was consciously designed as a midwestern town in both its physical character and social organization where ordinary citizens could live in a safe attractive economical community that was in harmony with the surrounding farmland Main Street Ready Made examines Greendale as an outgrowth of public policy an experiment in social engineering and an organic community that eventually evolved to embrace a huge shopping mall condominiums and expensive homes while still preserving much of the architecture and ambiance of the original village A snapshot of 1930s idealism and ingenuity Main Street Ready Made makes a significant contribution to the history of cities suburbs and social planning in mid century America
